Solving the Home Affordability Crisis: A Guide for Policymakers & Local Government Leaders

Home affordability is becoming a national crisis as even middle-income earners can no longer afford to buy a house in cities throughout the U.S. In some metro areas, between 33 percent and 50 percent of all households can't afford payments on a median-priced single-family home. This handbook offers advice on how to get started in confronting this challenge and shares best practices from leaders throughout the country who have implemented successful policies and initiatives.
