It seems Mr. Trump is taking a break this week. No public rallies are scheduled.

His flamboyant, sometimes bombastic personality has overshadowed every other person running for president, as we all know.

Trump's style has captivated millions of Americans and his campaign has been very successful thus far.

So successful that it has almost obliterated the fact that the Democratic president and Party in general has failed to improve America.

With Trump getting so much attention, the Democratic record has been obscured.

Consider this -- about two million more citizens live in poverty since President

Obama took office.

Poverty among women has increased by one million.

Among blacks, the poverty rate is up nearly one-and-a-half percent since the president was first elected.

Median income for all Americans has dropped an average of $2,000 since 2009.

That is an economic disaster. Yet few Americans really know the stats.
