Description/Significant Features:

The single-story, cross-gabled Period Cottage retains little original material. The building is approached on its southern gable end, which holds an off-centered door which is replacement. A replacement pedimented porch frames the doorway. A large multi-light replacement window is found to the east of the door. Paired replacement windows are found in the southern and eastern gables. The building's original exterior cladding has been removed and replaced with a combination of stucco, brick, and vinyl siding. A partially exposed, tapered, brick chimney projects through the building's western roof slope.

Alterations (include date(s), if known):

porch addition (late-twentieth-century)
replacement windows and doors (late-twentieth-century) replacement exterior cladding (late-twentieth-century)

Historical Information

Historical Information:

The 1951 and 1956 Spartanburg city directories document the house's residents as William and Maybin Turner (piano tuners). By 1961, William is no longer listed as a resident. By the 1968 directory, the property has passed into the hands of Donald E. Dole.
