Boeing Co. will build the 787-10 Dreamliner exclusively at its non-unionized plant in North Charleston, the Chicago-based aerospace giant announced Wednesday.

Note: Gov. Nikki Haley called Boeing's announcement "huge" for South Carolina. "That Boeing is committing the future of the Dreamliner to our state - the first place ever outside of Washington State that Boeing has built a commercial airplane - lets the whole world know that South Carolina workers are the best around. The success that Boeing South Carolina has become in less than five years is a testament to the Boeing leadership and above all, the Boeing employees whose talent and dedication make all of us so proud. It truly is another great day in South Carolina."

The State: Boeing to make newest, largest 787 exclusively in South Carolina
