South Carolina State Parks

The bad news is.....a fishermen hooked this loggerhead off of the Myrtle Beach State Park pier and damaged some of the soft tissue in its mouth. The good news is, he was brought ashore safely and transported to the SC Aquarium sea turtle hospital. Some of our staff were allowed to observe while the turtle was admitted. Not only will the turtle's mouth be treated, but it will also be treated for some other issues it had -- it was not in perfect health.

If you haven't been to the SC Aquarium sea turtle hospital, you are missing an incredible educational opportunity! We are so excited that this turtle will be nursed back to health.

Katrina Fitzgerald Is it normal for sea turtles to have so many barnacles on their back?

at 0:01:01 on 6/04/2015 UTC

Sally Whaley Kelly will fix him right up! A wonderful team to take care of our turtles. Thanks for all that y'all do.
