Description/Significant Features:

The Hanna Vermiculite Mine is the remnants of a mid-to late twentieth century mineral mining enterprise that operated on the property. The development of the mine from 1950 through the 1970s can be seen on aerial maps dating from the period; by the 1990s, the mine was no longer in use, the area had become reforested, and a modern hunting lodge had been constructed on the property. The extant aboveground resources associated with the mine consist of a bridge abutment over Hanna Creek, Old Rock Quarry Road, three reinforced concrete mining structures, and two ponds.

Alterations (include date(s), if known):

End of mining activities and removal of mining structures; reforestation of property

Architect(s)/Builder(s):

Unknown
