It's a heritage, it no longer represents anything to do with slavery or racism, it's a battle flag that is flown for the lives lost by the south in battle, it is once again a battle flag, it was not flown over slave ships like other flags that you see today were, it is simply just a battle flag. If this flag must come down then so should the flag we know and love as the 50 stars and bars flag, this flag flew over many slave ships before it evolved into the 50 stars, it was only 13 at the time, also many union generals were highly known slave owners, it wasn't just a southern thing

I don't believe in erasing the memories of those fallen for the South nor the history and heritage of it.
