BACKGROUND STATISTICS:

- Military has an approximately $20 billion impact on the state as a whole
- 8 military installations in the state encompass more than 74,000 (including active duty, reserve, and civilian contractors). Directly and indirectly, over 152,000 jobs are supported by the military statewide
- That generates approximately $8.6 billion in personal income and about $770 million annually in tax revenue (USC Study)
- SC is home to nearly 58,000 military retirees

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS:

Fort Jackson

- South Carolina has a long and proud military tradition. We were just named the Most Patriotic State in the country! That isn't an accident.
- The state has taken extraordinary measures to take care of our service members and veterans in recent years.
- We've improved state property tax laws to ease the stresses of homeownership for veterans, and make sure they aren't penalized when they're relocated.
- We've expedited the professional licensing process for incoming soldiers and spouses so that state agencies are not keeping licensed professionals from finding jobs before they arrive
- And just yesterday, we celebrated the 1 year anniversary of Operation Palmetto Employment, which is an initiative that aims to make sure we're connecting our veterans to all of the job opportunities we see around the state.

- We're becoming the most military-friendly state in the country. But we're facing unprecedented challenges at the federal level.
- We all know that the federal government spends too much money. We've got too much debt and our deficit is too high.
- But there's a right way and a wrong way to cut spending.
- And cutting the military – a core function of government – at a time of rising chaos in the world is the wrong way to cut spending.
- Not only will irresponsible budgeting practices at the federal level hamper U.S. leadership abroad, but it will make us weaker at home.
- For over 97 years, Fort Jackson has faithfully served this nation well – holding the responsibility for more Basic Combat Training soldiers than all other Army installations combined. Currently over 45,000 new soldiers go through Basic Training at Ft. Jackson every year.
- Fort Jackson's training expertise extends to a Drill Sergeant school responsible for "training the trainers", many enlisted and officer occupation-specific schools, as well as played a significant role in professionalizing the United States Armed Forces. Over 25,000 soldiers go through this type of advanced training.
- Instead of leveraging this expertise that has been developed and honed at Ft. Jackson, current proposals would gut this asset and severely undermine the capabilities of an installation that serves as a cornerstone of Army training and readiness.
- Fort Jackson is also a huge asset to the Midlands' economy, and the state's as a whole.
- Each year, Ft. Jackson directly and indirectly employs over 17,000 people in the Midlands, contributes over $2.2 billion to the local economy, and attracts over 250,000 out-of-state visitors, who stay in our hotels, eat in our restaurants and visit our landmarks.
- Unless Congress acts to lift or recalibrates the sequester, Ft. Jackson and the Columbia area could be devastated.
- A recent study completed by the University of South Carolina's Business School estimates that the effect of a possible personnel reduction of about 3,000 would generate a substantial loss to South Carolina, including a loss of $952 million in annual economic output, which would translate into job losses totaling around 8,000 and a loss of $421 million in labor income (the vast majority of which would occur in the Columbia/Midlands area).
- Simply put, the world is too dangerous to drastically reduce the military, and South Carolina's economy would be weakened by such irresponsible practices.
- That's why it's our responsibility to do what we as South Carolinians do best – get loud, raise our voices, and tell Congress and the President to lift the defense portions of the sequester.
