Jay Clingman God and the Civilian Conservation Corps - tax dollars at work, has lasted since the 1930's. A good investment - why can't we do this again?

Michael Garrity Looks gorgeous---what is the deal with the manmade stepped waterfalls--was it part of a water race for an old grain or other sort of mill??? Sorta looks like that to me.

at 3:46:28 on 2/29/2012 UTC

Michael Garrity I went to look at the photos they have posted on the website---that has to be a millrace. If that is the case---too bad the mill is gone--maybe they can search for funds to build a replica one day. I find the old water power mills to be simply fascinating buildings, relics from another time. Thank goodness a fair number still stand across the country--those buildings played an important role in helping to create this country.

Cheryl Metz I went there as a child!

Sylvie Dee has fond memories of Poinsett where my grandfather Marion Dwight served as superintendent for 25 years. I believe he designed and built the concrete and plank chairs that are still used by the lake. Thanks for the trip down Memory Lane.

at 11:03:40 on 2/29/2012 UTC

Laura Kirk @ Sylvia - You're right, Mr. Dwight did design and built those concrete and wood plank benches and chairs. I've seen his hand drawn blueprints for these in the SC Dept of Archives and History in Columbia.
