Carolina Adventures

Rocky Face Park | Statesville, NC

Mindful Practice in the Forest. Namaste.

This hidden gem, near Statesville, NC offers a great moderate to strenuous hiking trail over about five miles. Formerly a quarry, it ceased operations in the early 1940s. There were agricultural operations in the area, and local residents enjoyed the rock climbing and natural beauty of the area.

In 2003, it was listed on the North Carolina Registry of Natural Heritage Areas because of its unique qualities.

Today, the area includes a paved ADA walking track. The actual quarry area features a sheer cliff face – popular with qualified rock climbers. Fun to watch, but for many of us, the hiking trails outside the quarry area offer more realistic exercise/exploration possibilities. Hikers will travel along the top of the quarry cliffs and up to the mountain peak, where a magnificent view awaits. During the hike, watch for markers that identify the rare plants found in the area. Look for benches positioned courtesy an eagle scout project.

There is a picnic shelter, and restrooms are convenient. The park office and rangers are helpful and geocaching is available.

WOW Factor: Check out the special events, including hiking to yoga, and a public hawk watch in early Fall. Public star gazing is fun, and you may even see a wedding or family gathering in the park.

Hint: Cell phone, plenty of water, camera – all the usual items will come in handy, here. Open seven days a week from 8am to 8pm.

Taylorsville is the nearest town and if you don't want to take a picnic, seek out a local mom and pop store. Scotty's Home Town Grill has sandwiches, plate lunches and homemade desserts.

Famous Faces

Robert Smalls

April 5, 1839 -

February 23, 1915

Robert Smalls was born in Beaufort, SC, to a house servant named Lydia Polite. His father was never identified, but most historians believe it was Henry McKee, the son of the plantation owner where Lydia's family lived and worked.

Young Robert was carried around Beaufort by Mr. McKee, and enjoyed a life of relative ease, however his mother was determined to show him the plight of those who were enslaved. She made sure he was introduced to slave life on the plantation, and he even was exposed to the town whipping post, to see how others were treated. When he was 12, Lydia persuaded Henry McKee to allow young Robert to work in Charleston, doing odd jobs and learning about life, especially on the waterfront.

He found work on a boat called The Planter and gained the skills to become an excellent pilot. Robert married at 19 and had two children with his wife, Hannah Jones, who was also a slave.

Knowing they were all at the mercy of their masters, he concocted a plot and on May 13, 1862, he and several other enslaved men brought their families on board The Planter and they sailed past confederate blockades and into the arms of the Union Navy.

Freedom was theirs!

He was given an audience with President Abraham Lincoln, and worked for union forces during the rest of the war. Eventually, he achieved the rank of Major General in the South Carolina Militia during Reconstruction.

And here things really become interesting. He returned to Beaufort after the war, and purchased his former master's house at 511 Prince Street. His mother, Lydia, lived with the family as did his former master's widow, who was quite elderly.

Both remained with the Smalls until their deaths.

He was a delegate to several Republican National Conventions and was elected to the SC House of Representatives and the Senate.

During that time, he authored state legislation providing for South Carolina to have the first free and compulsory public Schools in the US. He also founded the Republican Party of South Carolina.

In 1874, he was elected to the US House of Representatives, holding the fifth, then seventh Congressional seats.

Robert Smalls lived a bold and colorful life. He died at 75 and is buried in his family's plot in the churchyard of the Tabernacle Baptist church in downtown Beaufort. He has 75 living descendants, however none bear the Smalls name. His home is occasionally open for tours and clearly marked in the historic section of Beaufort.

If you ever have the chance to visit the Robert Smalls traveling exhibit, make sure to do so. The man is fascinating and his story would make a fabulous movie.

The Golfing Smorgasbord that is Myrtle Beach

For the golfing gourmand, there is no place like Myrtle Beach.

Despite the fact that the Grand Strand, as its marketers call it, has lost nearly two dozen golf courses in the last 10 years, there is still more golfing variety along the 90-mile stretch of sand and pine forests than in any comparable area anywhere.

Whether you envision a private or semi-private golf club membership in your retirement, or whether you are inclined to save money and play a grand buffet of different layouts, the Myrtle Beach area golf scene will quell your appetite.

A Very Honorable Mention

We can almost taste April's first, fresh strawberries. To set the mood for lusciousness, we searched out a main dish that folds one of our first spring fruits into a completely healthy meal.

Thanks to Betty Thompson Morton, Kernersville, NC who won Honorable Mention at the 2013 Strawberry Recipe Contest, Piedmont Triad Farmers Market with this entry. We hear the judges took second helpings of her Strawberry Rice Salad with Chicken & Almonds.

Take a Hike Why Do We Love Waterfalls?

A recent blog from author Tim Spira shared this:

"Waterfalls are rare or absent over much of the earth's surface. If you're lucky enough to live near (or travel to) an area where waterfalls are abundant, beware! Hiking to waterfalls can become an obsession for which there is no known cure."

Sounds like a lovely obsession, especially for those who can choose to live near such beauty.

The UNC Press description tells us that if you love waterfalls, here are some of the best hikes in the Southern Appalachians. And if you love plants – or simply would like to learn more about them – you will be in hiking heaven: naturalist Tim Spira's guidebook links waterfalls and wildflowers in a spectacularly beautiful region famous for both. Leading you to gorgeous waterfalls in Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, South Carolina, and Georgia, the book includes many hikes in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park and along the Blue Ridge Parkway.
