USC School of Medicine-Greenville gets green light to move forward

The University of South Carolina School of Medicine-Greenville has been awarded preliminary accreditation, getting the green light to recruit students and open its doors in fall 2012.

The Liaison Committee on Medical Education, the definitive accrediting body for medical schools in the United States, notified USC and Greenville Hospital System University Medical Center (GHS) officials of their decision on the expanded medical education program Tuesday, Oct. 4. Preliminary accreditation is the first step in the accrediting process, which takes about four years.

USC President Harris Pastides said the announcement is a milestone for health care and education in the Palmetto State.

"This plan has been scrutinized at every level, and I am delighted that it has passed scrutiny with the true experts, the LCME," Pastides said. "Expanding medical education in Greenville is the right thing to do because it will increase the supply of physicians and advance efforts to retain physicians in the Upstate and the state at large."

Pastides said the fact that GHS officials approached USC about the expansion is recognition of the USC medical school's strong record of educating physicians who remain in the state and USC and GHS' longstanding partnership to offer clinical training to medical students in Greenville.

In 1991, the USC School of Medicine expanded its third and fourth years of medical training to GHS. The number of USC students who have completed their training at GHS is 271. Currently, 35 third-year students and 31 fourth-year students are doing their clinical training at GHS.

Founding Dean Jerry Youkey said the expansion will impact how healthcare is delivered in the Upstate.

"A day doesn't go by when I don't hear from interested students about whether the medical education program will get the go-ahead from the LCME," said Youkey, who also is GHS' vice president of medical and academic services. "I'm thrilled to finally say that the USC School of Medicine-Greenville is accepting applications. This program will significantly impact the way healthcare is delivered in our area. We are gratified for the confidence and support that has been provided to us from the citizens of South Carolina, the business community and our legislators."

USCSOM-Greenville will begin recruiting students and faculty immediately and expects to accept 50 first-year students for fall, Youkey said. Plans call for gradual expansion of each first-year class, with a goal of 100 students in the fourth entering class.

Dr. Jay Moskowitz, president and CEO of Health Sciences South Carolina, said the expanded program will advance healthcare, education and research.

"Every man, woman, and child in South Carolina and its adjoining regions will benefit tremendously from the expanded medical education program in Greenville," Moskowitz said. "It brings new opportunities for quality care, research and advanced education to our state. We are excited about this new addition in South Carolina for collaboration, care coordination and alignment of resources for clinical effectiveness."

Youkey said the USCSOM-Greenville curriculum will emphasize collaborative learning, early integration of direct patient care throughout all four years of training, interdisciplinary team-based care, interpersonal skills with an emphasis on communication, integration of research with real-world concerns and life-long learning.

Youkey said plans call for recruiting 22 to 24 basic sciences faculty. GHS has approximately 300 clinical faculty members. Most of the classes will take place in the Health Sciences Education Building, a state-of-the-art, 90,000-square-foot education facility that will include interactive team-focused “smart” classrooms and simulated patient clinical space where doctors in training will learn and practice patient-interaction skills. The building is on the Greenville Memorial Medical Campus close to GHS’ flagship regional referral center, Greenville Memorial Hospital.

The USCSOM-Greenville is the 136th medical education program in the United States and the only one that was accredited this year by the LCME.

Pastides said the fact that the program is not funded with public dollars made the arrangement particularly attractive. “We have an airtight agreement with GHS that this program will not rely on any state funds. To turn down a proposal to expand medical school education without state funds would not have been a wise decision for the people of our state.”

Thank you Jamie, We went and listened to Governor last night in Rock hill and she did a great job of telling the truth about the sad state of affairs we are in as a state and country. My husband almost blew a gasket because of the questions coming from the students were so irresponsible to him. He is a Chemical Engineer and runs multi-million dollar projects... His question to me was is everyone a social worker or artist that comes out of schools today? He said we are in bigger trouble than he thought after hearing the questions but said Nikki did a great job standing her ground to them. Tell Governor keep being honest and standing strong.

Best regards,

Paula Kinziger

Hi Jamie its me again, don't mean to bother you so but, these things are very important to our 4th amendment rights and we want to make sure Governor is aware of them. We know she is a very busy woman bringing badly needed jobs to our state and that is why we try to help her in other ways such as this. It's not so much for myself and others of the health issues as it is for the spying into our everyday lives. This is one of many videos that are out there on this subject and we don't want them in our state at all. It's also part of the Agenda 21 plan. We also want to let Governor know that we appreciate that she keeps us informed on FB and actually answers our questions. For that we are very thankful. Please give her our best and her family too.

Best regards,

Paula

Katherine,

Thanks for the advanced warning.

In my defense, I had to leave mid-afternoon with a family issue on March 2 and missed 3 votes (3152,3066,3070).

A "C" seems somewhat harsh given my overall record.

Dear Amy:

Unfortunately, I must inform you that we have to cancel the inauguration ceremony scheduled for November 16. Our corporate management in Germany notified me about this decision last Friday, citing scheduling conflicts as the primary reason. Our expansion project at our Duncan facility, however, will proceed as planned with the first machines scheduled to arrive next month.

We sincerely regret this unexpected decision but hope that it will be possible for Gov. Haley to visit our Duncan plant site sometime next spring.

Amy, we appreciate all your help in this matter and look forward to talking to you soon in the near future.

If you have any questions, please contact me at 864-433-8910, Ext. 1477.

Sincerely,

Ralph

FYI on term used for the Job Training bill.

Gina has it wrong in this article.

We are using parts of Georgia "Work Ready" as the model using work keys as the basis for our job training program with multiple State agencies being involved- DEW, Commerce, Ready SC (Tech Colleges), Voc Rehab, SDE Adult Ed and even K-12.

Georgia "Works" has not been successful.

Exclusive: Haley's Agenda for Year 2

By GINA SMITH
gnsmith@thestate.com

Governor Nikki Haley

- xx /xx

Gov. Nikki Haley's priorities for her second year in office include replicating a controversial Georgia jobs program to retrain S.C. workers, taking another stab at reforming the state's tax code and requiring state employees to work longer — 30 years instead of 28 — to receive full retirement benefits.

The Lexington Republican is traveling around the state this month, talking to residents in a series of town-hall meetings.

In those meetings, the first-term governor is laying out her agenda for her second legislative session. Friday, Haley sat down with The State to flesh out that agenda, starting with what can be done to lower the state's chronically high unemployment rate, now 11.1 percent.

Haley said she and her team have been talking with Georgia Gov. Sonny Perdue about how they can replicate that state's "Georgia Works" program here in South Carolina.

The program — which has won bipartisan praise, including some kind words from Democratic President Barack Obama — allows businesses to "hire" the unemployed for a limited period of time for free.

The jobless continue to collect their unemployment benefits while they are learning new job skills with their host company. At the end of that training period, they, hopefully, get a crack at landing a permanent job with the company.

Georgia residents receiving state unemployment benefits can sign up for 24 hours of on-the-job training for up to eight weeks with a local company. Residents also receive a stipend from taxpayers to help cover child care, transportation and other job training-related costs.

Fans say the program helps at least some of the unemployed get the new skills that they need to get a job.

According to the Georgia Department of Labor:

- In 2010, about 1,100 Georgia residents completed training programs at local companies through the "Georgia Works" program. Eleven percent were hired by those companies at the end of the training program.
- At least 69 percent of those new hires still had that job nine months later.

South Carolina's unemployment rate — the fourth-highest in the nation — is proof that the state's jobless need new skills, Haley said.

"There are a lot of people who want to be trained," Haley said Friday. "So how do you incentivize those who want to be trained and then also incentivize those to not want to sit on the couch?"

"I'm only doing half my job if I'm bringing these companies in if I'm not making sure our people are ready to take the jobs when the companies get here. If we have Bridgestone, if we have Continental Tire ... it's no good if when they get here, I don't have that work force ready to go and (the companies are) saying, 'Let's bring them (workers) from where we were.' "

Haley said the new program will be tailored to South Carolina's economy and workforce needs, and will not be an exact replica of the Georgia program. In Georgia, for example, the majority of program participants — 40 percent — were trained for clerical jobs.

"Georgia is very different," Haley said, adding that South Carolina has a burgeoning transportation industry. "We are making things in South Carolina. You've got three major tire companies. You've got planes. You've got cars."

The Georgia program has its critics. They say the program misuses unemployment money and exploits desperate job-seekers, willing to work for free, just for the chance of getting a job.

At first blush, lawmakers — even Haley critics — say they are open to the plan and want to hear more. "I'm willing to work with her or anybody else on efforts that put people back to work," said House Minority Leader Harry Ott, D-Calhoun.

Tax reform — again

Haley said she and her staff also will begin pushing for tax reform in January. The entire plan will take three to four years to fully enact, she said.

The first phase? Simplify the state's income tax, Haley says.

"We have six tax brackets. We're going to simplify it down. We're probably going to go down to about three tax brackets," she said. "You should not have to have a rocket scientist to do your taxes. It should be simple."

Democrat Ott said it is too early to say whether Haley's plan will gain traction with lawmakers.

"Who does the burden get shifted on?" Ott said. "If I'm in the lowest tax bracket and she combines it into three, does that mean I'm going to have to pay a higher tax? Or if I'm the wealthiest, will I get a tax decrease? Until you put a specific plan on the table, it's all just talk."

Haley says the details still are being worked out but include:

- Phasing out the corporate income tax to encourage new businesses to locate in the state.
- Reducing the state's manufacturing tax, now 10.5 percent.

"When you see the Boeings and the Bridgestones come in, the reason they're not complaining about 10.5 (percent) is they're getting (job creation tax credit) incentives to not have to pay it. But the small Mom and Pops that don't have that many employees, those are the one we need to be helping," Haley said.

Over the past few decades, dozens of commissions and committees have recommended overhauls of the state's complicated tax code — to no avail.

Both Republicans and Democrats are quick to call the state's tax system broken, pointing to the fact that the system exempted more in sales tax than it collected in 2010 as one example.

But, despite that consensus, nothing ever happens.

Last year, for instance, a commission of tax and finance experts completed its yearlong study of ways to overhaul the state's tax code, recommending a comprehensive list of changes to lawmakers.

But lawmakers — nervous about recommendations to charge sales tax on items now that now are exempt from that tax, including prescription drugs, groceries and utilities, in exchange for an overall lower sales tax rate — never acted on any of the recommendations.

Haley said she will sell her plan directly to the public and lawmakers to ensure its passage.

"What I'm going to tell lawmakers is, 'You want me to keep bringing these companies to South Carolina, you have to do this,' " she said.

Haley may have some help on the subject in the upcoming legislative session; she is not the only Republican looking to make tax reform a priority.

House Speaker Bobby Harrell, R-Charleston, recently formed a committee of House Republicans to look for ways to reform the tax system.

"We want to make (the tax system) more competitive and fair," said Greg Foster, Harrell's spokesman. "We're not looking to make another study that sits on a shelf."

Ellen J. Kullman
Chair of the Board & Chief Executive Officer

Ellen Kullman, 55, is chair of the board and chief executive officer of DuPont. She is the 19th executive to lead the company in more than 208 years of DuPont history.

Ellen became CEO on Jan.1, 2009, and chair of the board on Dec. 31 that year. She was president from Oct. 1 through Dec. 31, 2008. Prior to that, she served as executive vice president and a member of the company's office of the chief executive.

As CEO, Ellen has championed market-driven science to drive innovation across the company's businesses. Under her leadership, decision making has moved closer to customers around the world, resulting in greater partnering, collaboration, and solutions attuned to local needs.

A native of Wilmington, Del., Ellen began her career at DuPont in 1988 as a marketing manager. She served as business director for several businesses including White Pigment & Mineral Products where she became vice president and general manager in 1995. She assumed leadership of two high-growth businesses, DuPont Safety Resources in 1998 and Bio-Based Materials in 1999. She was named group vice president - DuPont Safety & Protection in 2002. In 2006, she was named executive vice president with responsibility for three business platforms and several functions including Marketing & Sales. In 2008, she was tapped to lead the company's focus on growth in emerging international markets.

She is a member of the U.S.-India CEO Forum, the Business Council, and the executive committee of SCI-America. She is co-chair of the National Academy of Engineering Committee on Changing the Conversation: From Research to Action.

Ellen is a member of the board of directors of United Technologies Corp. She also is on the board of trustees of Tufts University and serves on the board of overseers at Tufts University School of Engineering.

Prior to joining DuPont, Ellen worked for General Electric. She holds a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering from Tufts University and a masters degree in management from Northwestern University.

BACKGROUND:

*This is DuPont's largest investment in the world in the company's history.

* In July, DuPont marked 209th year in operation. Our founder, E.I. duPont de Nemours, was an immigrant French chemist who was encouraged to enter the gunpowder business by none other than Thomas Jefferson -- it was Jefferson who realized the newly formed United States would need its own gunpowder production businesses, and not be reliant on its defense to foreign interests.

* The U.S. government was DuPont's first customer. Over the next two centuries, science and constant innovation have been DuPont's keys to continued success -- from explosives, to chemicals, textiles and advanced fibers (such as Kevlar).

* And in our 3rd century, we're continuing to make significant advances in biotechnology -- including advances in materials to reducing reliance on petroleum-based products; improving our ability to feed and protect a growing global population; and advances in biofuel production.

Cooper River Message Platform – 9/30/11

Core Message

Level 1 DuPont has announced the start up of its $500 million Cooper River Kevlar® facility near Charleston, S.C. DuPont is a company built on innovation and supports its customers and other stakeholders with continued investments in Kevlar® products. The Cooper River facility is the latest step in our commitment to provide materials that protect more people from more hazards around the world.

Supporting Message

Level 2 Globally the initial production capacity for Kevlar® will increase by 25 percent and is expected to grow by 40 percent, with planned productivity improvements and continued technology developments over the next two years. The new capacity will allow DuPont to provide customers with next-generation Kevlar® products that improve their ability to innovate in many applications.

Proof Points

Level 3 The Cooper River plant uses state of the art technology that allows DuPont to support growing industries around the world by expanding product lines and boosting productivity.

It also will increase U.S. industrial capabilities critical for advanced materials innovation, the sustainment of a skilled workforce, and national security.

Along with the recent $50M investment at its Spruance plant in Richmond, Va., the Cooper River investment represents the largest single investment in Kevlar® and the largest capacity increase since the fiber was introduced in 1965.

Supporting Message

Level 2 DuPont's investment in the Cooper River plant will support job creation, increased research & development and a growing global economy.

Proof Points

Level 3 The Cooper River Kevlar® plant has created 135 jobs and was built over a period of three years using a construction workforce of up to 800.

The Cooper River Kevlar® plant will initially make products that support three primary technology platforms: DuPont™ Kevlar® AP, DuPont™ Kevlar® KM2 Plus and DuPont® Kevlar® XP™ for growing applications in ballistics, other personal protective equipment, aerospace, tires, fiber optic cables, oil and gas and automotive. DuPont has R&D facilities and customer applications centers for Kevlar® in every region: Shanghai, China; Hyderabad, India; Paulina, Brazil; Meyrin, Switzerland, Richmond, Va. and Wilmington, Del. In 2010, DuPont overall spent $1.7 billion on R&D, funding advancements in discovery research, product development and process improvements. As we develop next-generation materials, foster innovation and forge new research partnerships, DuPont is dedicated to shaping the future of protective technologies.

Supporting Message

Level 2 The Cooper River plant expansion is just one example of how DuPont continues to innovate with customers and partners to protect people and the environment in the U.S. and worldwide.

Proof Points

Level 3 DuPont works collaboratively with customers around the world to develop new technologies with Kevlar® such as Goodyear tires, Ansell cut-resistant gloves and Safariland body armor.

Best known for its use in ballistic and stab-resistant body armor, Kevlar® has helped save the lives of thousands of law enforcement and military personnel around the world. DuPont is a leading provider of body and vehicle armor to the U.S. military. The company has been serving the U.S. Government for more than 200 years.

The proven performance of Kevlar® has created increasing demand in many other protective applications, including the aerospace, oil and gas, alternative energy and automotive industries, where the combination of lightweight strength and other unique properties enable new designs and increased reliability.

The Cooper River expansion exemplifies DuPont's philosophy of inclusive innovation by enabling new uses of Kevlar® across multiple industries.

BACKGROUND:

Capital investment: $500 million

Job total: 1,700 over 10 years; includes 80 new jobs at the company
HQ in Fort Mill (Lancaster County).

First phase: brings the plant's production capacity to 5 million tires per year by 2017

Second phase: brings the plant's production capacity to 8 million tires per year by 2021

Plant: Site covers 330 acres; building is planned to be in excess of 1 million square feet. Construction to begin in mid-2012.

Tires: Will be produced under both the Continental and General brands. Will produce for both replacement tire market and automakers.

South Carolina operations:

Operation in SC called Continental Tire the Americas LLC. It is the HQ for Continental tires in the Americas – including Mexico and Brazil.
The HQ moved to MacMillan Business Park in Fort Mill (Lancaster County) from Charlotte. The move was announced in Feb. 2008 and completed in early 2009.

At the time of the move, the op was called Continental Tire North America, but name changed in 2010 because of company growth in South America.

Continental also used to have production in Charlotte.

Announced investment in 2008 was $11 million for land and the new 75,000-sq-ft facility. The HQs has about 375 employees.

Continental used to have ops in Blythewood and Columbia that now house Pure Power Technologies.

Continental in Fort Mill has donated "$35,000 to the Lancaster County schools. In addition, the company has given 350 tires to the county for use in its police, fire and municipal vehicles. Altogether, the donations are valued at nearly $100,000." (May 2010)

Also of note:

Schaeffler Group, which has several operations in S.C., owns a chunk of Continental AG. As of March 2011, Schaeffler held 60.3% of Continental. Maria-Elisabeth Schaeffler is on the Supervisory Board of Continental AG.

More about the company:

Continental Tire the Americas, LLC (CTA, formerly Continental General Tire) is a subsidiary of Continental AG. CTA acquired General Tire in 1987.

CTA employs 9,000 employees. Continental Tire has six locations throughout the Americas:

Fort Mill, SC; Mount Vernon, IL; Mississauga, ON; San Luis Potosi,
Mexico; Camacari, Brazil; Quito, Ecuador

These manufacturing plants produce one-third of the Continental Corporation's total passenger and commercial tires. Continental is a major supplier to the original equipment and replacement tire markets, selling Continental, General, Euzkadi and private brands in

NAFTA. Sales in North America include:

Passenger, Original Equipment 25%

Passenger, Replacement Business 34%

Private Brands 5%

Truck Tires 29%

Farm and Earthmover Tires 5%

Other 2%

CTA supplies passenger car tires to original equipment customers that include BMW, Ford, General Motors, Mercedes-Benz, Nissan, Toyota and Volkswagen.

Commercial vehicle tires are delivered to Caterpillar, John Deere, Freightliner, International, Ford, Mack and Volvo.

Continental Tire Worldwide

Continental is the # 1 tire maker in Germany, # 2 in Europe and # 4 in the world.

BACKGROUND:

140-150 Attendees registered. 75% tourism officials and 25% higher education officials from across the state.

The South Carolina Travel and Tourism Coalition invites you to attend the Tourism & Higher Learning Education Summit at the Columbia Metropolitan Convention Center on October 7, 2011, beginning at 10:00am and ending at 3:00pm. Join us for a day of collaborative discussions between two of South Carolina's most important economic forces: Tourism & Higher Education.

As South Carolina's largest industry, it is important that we engage in the development of our workforce by exploring collaborative opportunities for internships and mentoring programs between the tourism industry and our higher education institutions. The SCTTC Tourism & Education Summit will feature two interactive panel discussion sessions with educators and tourism professionals from across South Carolina, as well as a lunch featuring special guest speakers.

Educators, Tourism and Business Leaders and Public Sector Partners engage in a lively discussion centered on our theme:

Tooling Tourism's Workforce for the 21st Century

Talking Points from PRT

- It is a pleasure to be here today to welcome all of you to the Tourism and Higher Education Summit
- Given the impact of tourism on our state's economy, it is imperative to address both long and short term planning to ensure the vitality of this industry
- And one way to ensure the continued health and growth of tourism in South Carolina is to develop a knowledgeable, well-trained work force
- Internships and apprenticeships, whether in the tourism industry or any other field, provide our students with valuable workplace experience
- Through these types of programs, our students can experience firsthand the application of the principles they have learned in the classroom
- And it also provides opportunities for them to connect with members of the business community that they will join after graduation
- In addition, these programs allow our state's businesses to become a part of the education process – to help shape and mature the next generation of South

Carolina's workforce

- I am glad that you all have decided to be a part of this summit today – to take the time to learn more about the programs and opportunities that currently exist
- And I hope that you will also use this occasion to explore new opportunities for internship programs – to gauge the changing needs of our State's tourism business community – and begin making plans for the next generation of workforce development

BACKGROUND:

10-15 minute interview with Governor Haley. The SC Farm Bureau produces 8 to 10 episodes for the weekly RFD-TV network program "Farm Bureau's Voices of Agriculture." Our next episode airs on October 19 – so we will need all interviews shot before Oct 7 to allow for post-production. The program, produced by a number of state Farm Bureaus airs weekly on Wednesdays at 6:30 EST. The next installment will feature the strength of agricultural voices in South Carolina – as agribusiness is the state's largest economic sector. I will be the interviewer and plan to ask the Governor general questions about the power of agriculture in South Carolina, the importance of hearing from farmers and farm families as political decisions are made, etc. Others to be interviewed (with similar questions) include House, Senate, and agribusiness leaders around the state.
