Dear Madam,

On October 28, 2014, I submitted a notice of Disagreement and a letter asking for the Department of Veterans Affairs for Assistance to help substantiate my claims. No response from the Department of Veterans Affairs has been acknowledged as of this letter to you. At the CMP for my hearing the Dr. said it was my left ear until I told her it was my right ear, and she begin to tell me it was my left ear. She apparently had not read my service file prior to the hearing test. In her eagerness I felt she was eager to use any other reason for my hearing loss. As I stated to her that I had went on sick call and seen a medic after the tank muzzle incident. The medic just looked into my ear with his naked eye. He could not see anything and gave me some aspirins for the pain. Some medics did not or were not the best record keeper at the time when a soldier went on sick call in their units. I felt she was bias and did not evaluate me with an open mind. She was eager to find any other reason for my hearing lost other than from the muzzle incident.

Here is my conjecture on the evaluation on my hearing loss that it happened just as I claimed. On my April 29, 1960 exam no hearing test was ever performed on me. In my opinion that is reasonable doubt that my hearing was not properly evaluated prior to leaving military service. I was stationed in Kaiserslautern, Germany in 1959 and while some of us soldier were yelling out of the window of our barrack from the third floor to officers passing by. We were told that the whole third floor had volunteered to go to Vietnam on TDY. This TDY happened somewhere between January – August 1959. We were there for about three weeks off-loading vehicles and equipment to include liquid chemicals in drums. We were all on Temporary Duty. Upon return our orders taken and destroyed. This is where the Department of Veterans Affairs help is needed to access any report from Kaiserslautern Germany to verify soldiers going to Vietnam sometime between Janurary – August 1959. Thanks for your help.
