South Carolina State Parks

at 12:04:52 on 11/04/2012 UTC · 🌐

SURVEY! We hope you remembered to fall back last night. This time change....love it? Or not so much? And why?

Marianne Revie Not so much - less daylight to enjoy the outdoors

at 12:06:06 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Paul McKinnon i find it instering a person comenting on sc state parks is near duram nc now /// now to comment on the time change i can tqke it or leave it

at 12:06:36 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Kathy Roseman Barefoot The reason for doing this no longer exists. I say leave our time alone to go with nature and stop the craziness!!!

at 12:07:14 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Heather Dewberry No we should leave time alone like Arizona.

at 12:08:21 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Jackie Smith Scott Hate it! And what about the Durham, NC thing?

at 12:08:34 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Amy Bennett Uhlemann I don't mind it per say (LOVE the extra hr sleep in fall; hate spring change) but I find it completely unnecessary.

at 12:09:25 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Amy Gosnell Wilkinson I hate it! Go to work in the dark and come home in the dark

at 12:10:13 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Lucie Hancock I suppose I am used to it. There are pros and cons either way. Now I can get my morning walk in earlier, but in the evening there is less daylight te for outside chores.

at 12:13:52 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Joyce Ann Baldwin Pack Don't like it. I love the longer evenings and sunlight,

at 12:15:17 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Mark Harrill Just another numbing of America!

You got your American Idol President now... and the Sheeple are following the flock....

at 12:17:49 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Stephen A. Towe It's a bunch of idiots that made this up, who all probably still believe in global warming. Changing time is not the role of government-it is an individuals choice as to what time to get up, go to bed, etc. Changing the time to accomodate getting the most possible amount of "light" infused work time is disruptive to normal sleep patterns, and a classic example of nanny government trying to control our personal lives.

at 12:19:23 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Joyce Ann Baldwin Pack What in the world does your comment have to do with Daylight Savings Time Chad? Geez, get a life. If you have a beef with Paul, deal with him in another forum ther than on Facebook.

at 12:19:30 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Cynde Price Douglas @the Durham comment ... that may be a satellite error ... I have had friends posting from an Ipad and it will say they posted from some town fifty or more miles away.

at 12:20:15 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Regi King I like long days, so I do not like it getting dark earlier. Bummer for me.
at 12:20:38 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Cynde Price Douglas I would rather have the evening daylight instead of dark
at 12:20:54 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Ginger Dereksen Don't like it. But it is better then the spring thing.
at 12:21:45 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Joy Hill Geez got some grumpy people on here this morning! This person could be with a relative in NC for all we know. Doesn't matter about the location. Answer to question: I prefer not to fall back an hour. Leave as is. Happy Sunday everyone!
at 12:27:15 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Cynde Price Douglas They were probably in NC for the Clemson game ... YaY Tigers !!!
at 12:30:35 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Julie Hanna Atkinson This, after "falling back", is our normal time. DST in the spring was created when farming and exporting crops was our main source of national income. That is no longer the case, and I, for one, wish we would do away with it altogether. Now, instead, we have lengthened DST for no apparent reason.
at 12:34:55 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Christina Lee Time change is completely stupid. I hate it./
at 12:37:28 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Susan Crocker Starker Cantrell do away!
at 12:42:44 on 11/04/2012 UTC

South Carolina State Parks I am traveling this weekend and still keep up with the Facebook page no matter the time or place I am.
at 12:44:47 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Laura Kirk I think we should keep daylight savings time all year long :D
at 12:44:47 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Angie Garrett Brown Not
at 12:47:48 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Stephen Bellows Love the change of time ^^ Just remember 2 CHANGE your President on Tues. !.
at 12:55:02 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Sue Cramer No likey,,,,,
at 12:57:03 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Ginger Dereksen In my area the time was changed so children would not be standing out in the dark as long to wait for school bus in the country. I still don't like it but see the benefit. Then it is changed back in the spring because the sun comes up earlier.
at 13:02:50 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Rex Linnenkohl To the one that said whoever made up the time change still believes in global warming that isn't possible because whoever made it up has probably been dead for a long long long time now.

Robyn Simmons Harris I'm one of those people the change wreaks havoc on my mind & body so I hate it. And the kids around here are still waiting for the bus in the cold & dark & getting home just before dark. And to Chad & Paul: you are asinine but probably can't help it; bless your hearts.

Emmy Bennett I don't think global warming was even a concept when DST was created. @ Mark

at 13:42:00 on 11/04/2012 UTC

April Hawthorne Kelley I feel like we can't stay out as long exploring Nature or taking long hikes because it gets dark at 5:30. It's okay though because before we know it Spring will greet us again with longer days:)

at 13:42:49 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Emmy Bennett @ Mark Harrill...what are you talking about???

at 13:43:20 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Tammy Wilkins Jenkins Folks-remember the days are always the same length-24 hrs. The daylight hours are naturally getting shorter, which they have been since the summer solstice. No amount of fiddling with the clock is going to change that. The change back to standard (normal!) gets blamed for shorter days, when in fact it simply makes people notice the naturally shortening days. Also don't know what prompted the extension of DST-obviously not a concern for school bus riders standing in the dark, which the kids (and parents) have had to endure for weeks now. Leave the time at standard time. Let our bodies learn how to naturally adjust to the seasonal changes in light.

Kristina Fallon we have 3 shifts now...does not save much...I dont care witch time they pick just pick one...I like it DST but just leave it all year

at 13:55:44 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Rose Reedy Just wish we'd get on one time and leave it at that. Don't care if it's daylight savings time or standard, just choose one and let mother nature do her thing.

at 14:35:31 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Nancy Edwards Phillips i don like the time change makes me be going home from work in the dark at 6 30

at 14:36:15 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Jen Swearington No! Threw off my trail running schedule.

at 14:49:43 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Don Foley the reason for DST to be enacted no longer exists or does not apply. depends on which explanation you were told. anyway, leave the clocks on standard time.

at 15:04:13 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Harley Joe Marlow Great way to screw up the end of hunting season. Hard to get off work and get jn the stand when it is almost dark when i get off now.

at 15:28:58 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Melissa Eide No I think they should leave it alone.

at 16:22:58 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Mary Esterline It doesn't both me at all .

at 17:16:33 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Mary Esterline Bother me

at 17:16:47 on 11/04/2012 UTC

Jody R. Boyce I love it, its the first day in the a long time in Nebraska that I get to wake up with sunshine.
