Subject: Supreme Court Decision Bad for Low-Income Seniors

If you believe that poor seniors should have at least the same access to justice through the courts as telecom companies, oil giants, automakers, and the tobacco industry, you should be very disappointed in yesterday's Supreme Court decision in Armstrong v. Exceptional Child Center.

The decision rejected Idaho health care providers' attempt to enforce a provision of the Medicaid Act that requires states to ensure that doctors and other Medicaid-participating providers are adequately paid. Find the rest of the story on our blog.
