Dear Mr Tony Kester,

SMi's 16th annual Pain Therapeutics conference will feature a dedicated spotlight on opioid dependency when it returns to London this May.

This follows on from new guidelines issued last week from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) advising doctors against prescribing opioids to treat chronic pain and a recent report by the department of Anaesthesiology and Critical Care at the University of Pennsylvania, highlighting that Physicians are prescribing more opioid painkillers than ever before to patients undergoing common surgeries.*

Highlights in the opioid session at Pain Therapeutics 2016 will include:

1. A presentation from leading chronic pain consultant, Prof. Remigiusz Lecybyl on strategies to minimise risk for opioid dependency. The address will focus on the use of prescription monitoring programmes and alternatives to opioid dependency.
2. A keynote address from Nektar Pharmaceutical's Senior Vice President and Chief Scientific Officer, Dr Stephen Doberstein, on a novel mu-opioid analgesic designed for inherent low abuse liability.
3. Insight into emerging treatment options for moderate to severe chronic pain presented by
