Many cultures around the world have a socially coordinated response to death and bereavement. Archaeologists can use the vestiges of these responses—usually expressed via funerals, burials, and commemorative practices—to examine the social bonds that held ancient societies together. Cicek Beeby will present a few case studies from around the ancient Mediterranean and explore the relationship between the living and the dead in these cultures.

A wine and cheese reception will follow the lecture.

Ms. Beeby is a doctoral candidate with the Classics Department at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She is studying Classical Archaeology, specializing in burial customs and the archaeology of early Greece.
