BACKGROUND:

Margaret Pope is the president of The Crescent Society, an organization of women that recognizes and inspires leadership excellence in South Carolina Women. They meet six times a year in Columbia. Their membership includes women in either public or private sectors who have reached an executive level in their organization. Among their members are administrators of counties, superintendents of school districts as well as public relation directors for our largest businesses, and many more.

TALKING POINTS:

They would like for the Governor to touch on how it is to be the first woman Governor and where she has found her strength in the face of a myriad of challenges South Carolina has faced this past year (Charleston shooting, the Confederate Flag, and the recent flooding).
