Got it – like I said previously, as far as data goes, I can only base the story off of what it in the official releases because that’s the only source that covers the entire state, but I will include some of these figures to show what has been done here during her terms.

This email makes me curious if there’s any sort of follow up on those jobs announcements – I know off the top of my head that she was at a Marion County announcement (according to her official schedule) where more than 200 jobs were announced by Essex Holdings with a $50 million investment, those jobs never came and the CEO is charged with fraud – That’s probably a different story than what I’m working on, but it seems like announcing jobs and coming through on those don’t exactly line up. Especially with Marlboro and Marion having two of the highest unemployment figures in the state.

As I mentioned on the phone with Rob, the piece that airs Tuesday isn’t some sort of hit piece and the big question still remains – was there something that happened around 2015 that made the governor focus her attention more on other parts of the state than ours?

Hope you guys have a good weekend,

Matt
