Blog: Supporting Older Americans and their Caregivers

This week, the White House hosted an important conversation about supporting older Americans and their caregivers as part of the White House Conference on Aging.

Our conversation encompassed the vast diversity in types of caregiving – from a family caregiver who cares for her aging Veteran husband, to family caregivers with full-time jobs who are trying to balance their career with their child and elder care responsibilities to a home care worker who travels many miles per day to care for a diverse group of older Americans with different needs.
