

From: Symmes, Brian <BrianSymmes@gov.sc.gov>

To:

Date: 11/7/2014 9:52:26 AM

Subject: SC Front Pages – Friday, November 7, 2014

SC Front Pages – Friday, November 7, 2014

Could Clemson overcome Wake Forest?

Find out in Sports, 1B

INDEX-JOURNAL

www.indexjournal.com

2 SECTIONS, 20 PAGES

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 2014

DAILY 75¢, SUNDAY $1.50

Seeking reform

Haley hopes to see change in how state ethics violations are handled

By SEANNA ADCOX

Associated Press

COLUMBIA — Gov. Nikki Haley said Thursday she's optimistic about getting ethics reform through the South Carolina Legislature next year.

The newly re-elected Republican governor said the Legislature feels pressure following former House Speaker Bobby Hared's guilty plea to campaign spending violations. As part of

See REFORM, page A4

■ 2014 ELECTION

Republican Congress could get plenty done

By COLIN RIDDLE

criddle@indexjournal.com

Regardless of political loyalty, decisive action for the betterment of the nation's communities can always be agreed upon.

After Election Day 2014, Republicans control the U.S. Senate and the U.S. House of Representatives with one of their largest majorities since World War II.

Republicans currently occupy 52 seats to the Democrats' 43 and Independents two in the Senate. Republicans have the majority, but not the necessary number to bypass the presidential veto in either chamber — a luxury for two-thirds. There's also strategic political tools, such as the filibuster, to slow up any undesired legislation — the Senate needing 60 votes to stop such an act.

"My number one observation from a Republican point of view,"

See CONGRESS, page A4

■ CAR THEFT, WRECK

Police search for suspects in carjacking

By DANIEL PERRY

derry@indexjournal.com

Greenville police and Greenwood County's bloodhounds searched late Thursday night for two men suspected of stealing a vehicle and ramming it into Quick Way at the corner of Nine-

LINDSEY GRAHAM

One of the hundreds of recently discovered tombstones stands among the weeds in Fairview Cemetery on Holman Road in Greenwood as the historical cemetery undergoes cleanup.

Abbeville teen dies after 2-vehicle wreck

From staff reports

An autopsy is planned for this morning for an Abbeville resident killed late Thursday morning in Saluda County.

Jared Ray Boren, 18, was killed at 11:14 a.m. in a two-vehicle wreck one mile east of Amick Farms LLC on Batesburg Highway near Batesburg-Leesville, said Saluda County Coroner Keith Turner. Boren was wearing a seat belt, according to the South Carolina Highway Patrol.

Boren was driving a 2002 Mercury with two passengers west on the highway when he drove left of the center line and struck a 2015 Freightliner head-on going eastbound.

One passenger in the Mercury was taken by helicopter to Palmetto-Richland Memorial Hospital in Columbia. A second passenger in the Mercury was taken by ambulance to Self Regional Medical Center in Greenwood.

The driver of the tractor-trailer, 65-year-old Floyd Washington of Johnston, was not wearing a seat belt and not injured.

GRAVE SITUATION

Residents work to clean up, restore Fairview Cemetery

By DANIEL PERRY
dperry@indexjournal.com

Jay Collins, of Greenwood, held long shears as he cut kudzu Thursday morning at what became a hidden historical gem.

Collins, a retired chaplain at Self Regional Medical Center, volunteers twice a week to help clean up Fairview Cemetery on Holman Street in Greenwood. The cemetery is thought to have at least 800 burials dating back as far as the late 1800s discovered through newspaper obituaries and county death certificates.

"I see it as accomplishing good for the community to show respect for those that gave so much to Greenwood and I have benefited from the experience from getting to know some of the people in the community," Collins said.

Want to help?

■ Want to get involved in the effort to clean and preserve Fairview Cemetery? Contact Robin Foster, chairwoman of the Fairview Cemetery Project and a volunteer in the Lawrence Genealogy and Local History Room at the Greenwood County Library at 864-941-4650.

Cemetery conditions improved since restoration work began in the spring. Part of the property is cleared off and grave markers pop up like cacti in a desert. But beyond the cleared off land are still overgrown trees, kudzu and tangled brush. Primitive trails were made to explore the cemetery further.

"There could be twice as many more stones as we have now," Robin Foster, of Greenwood, said a volunteer in the Lawrence Genealogy and Local History Room at the Greenwood County Library.

The graves are in different shapes and sizes. Arrah N. Burkett, Feb. 2, 1836-Jan. 2, 1942 Gone But Not Forgotten 1874-1939

See GRAVE, page 3A

PHOTOS BY MADDY JONES | INDEX-JOURNAL
Cleanup volunteers: Robin Foster, left, Ruth Collins, middle, and Jay Collins sort through weeds and brush Thursday to uncover tombstones at the Fairview Cemetery.

SPORTS, 1C
PLAYOFFS KICK OFF

BUSINESS, 11A
Greenville
hot sauces win Scovie

The Greenville News

A GANNETT COMPANY

FRIDAY,
NOVEMBER 7, 2014
GREENVILLEONLINE.COM

USA TODAY

US JETS MAY HAVE BOMBED FRENCH BOMB MAKER PAGE 1B

FINAL EDITION

Intent to sue filed for three in GHS infection cases

Surgical patients contracted Mycobacterium abscessus

By Liv Osby
Staff Writer
l.osby@greenvillenews.com

Notice of intent to sue Greenville Health System has been filed in state court by Greenville attorney Blake Smith on behalf of three surgical patients who contracted an infection earlier this year.

Fifteen patients were infected and four died after contracting the Mycobacterium abscessus infection at Greenville Memorial Hospital, officials said.

Dr. Angelo Sinopoli, chief medical officer for GHS, said the hospital had ongoing conversations with Smith and was aware that notices of intent were being filed.

"We cannot comment on pending litigation, but want to reiterate our on-going commitment to affected patients and families," he said. "GHS continues to coordinate and provide treatment for the patients who have not completed the treatment plan."

Two of Smith's filings involve wrongful death suits for two of the patients who died — Ella Mae Mattison and Henry Weinacker. The third is a medical negligence case involving patient Thomas Fowler, who has survived.

Mattison, a homemaker from Pickens County, underwent coronary bypass surgery in September 2013 and subsequently developed drainage from the incision site, according to documents filed with the Court of Common Pleas. She was given antibiotics and discharged on Oct. 2.

In March 2014, after she was readmitted to Greenville Memorial for a large aortic pseudoaneurysm, staff noticed that she had "toxic appearing tissues." A culture confirmed she had the Mycobacterium infection and she was

See SUE, Page 7A

PHOTOS BY HEIDI HEILBRUNN/STAFF

Alan Scheidhauer, head of Greenville Technical College's Culinary Institute of the Carolinas, pulls potatoes out of the school's garden, which will be part of the new sustainable agriculture program.

College campus garden brings farming to the table

Greenville Technical will launch program in fall.

By Lillia Callum-Penso
Staff Writer
l.penso@greenvillenews.com

The organic teaching farm on Greenville Technical College's Northwest campus is quiet these days. The cooler months aren't as exciting as summer when red-ripe tomatoes are hanging from the vines, but still, there is much to learn from the acre plot that was established last spring.

The teaching garden used by the Culinary Institute of the Carolinas has given rise to something bigger, a new academic program that will focus on sustainable agricultural education.

It's an idea that sprouted from the growing interest in local and organic food coupled with the farm-to-table movement, and one creators say could help reshape the food economy of the Upstate, even the Carolinas.

"There is more interest in sustain-

Tomatoes and okra were among the crops at the campus, which now is planning a new academic program that will focus on sustainable agricultural education. "There is more interest in sustainable now," Alan Scheidhauer said.

Lack of suspense a suspect in low turnout

43.6 percent of state voters cast their ballots

By Rudolph Bell
Staff Writer
rbell@greenvillenews.com

A lack of suspense in statewide races was one reason cited for historically low voter turnout in Tuesday's election.

Across South Carolina, 43.6 percent of active, registered voters cast ballots, according to unofficial returns, the lowest figure since at least 1974, said Chris Whitmire, spokesman for the State Election Commission.

In Greenville County, turnout was 43.9 percent, lower than for any governor's race that county elections director Conway Belangia said he could remember in his 28-year career.

David Woodard, a professor of political science at Clemson University, said he wasn't surprised because voters could tell how the races were going to turn out.

"I don't think it signals the end of democracy or anything like that," Woodard said. "I think people knew what the outcome was."

Across South Carolina, Gov. Nikki Haley and other Republicans beat Democratic rivals by large margins, if the Republicans had any competition at all.

In the Sixth Congressional District, longtime Democratic incumbent Jim Clyburn won with more than 72 percent of the vote.

Robert Oldendick, a professor of political science at the University of South Carolina, cited low approval ratings for candidates in both parties, voter disgust with negative campaign ads, and races with predictable outcomes because of gerrymandered districts.

"They all seem to be working to push people to be turned off with the system, and the result is we get this historically low turnout," Oldendick said.

Danielle Vinson, a professor of political science at Furman University, chalked it up to voters disappointed with government who don't see elections as a way to solve the problem or aren't happy with their choices.

RIVALRY GAME: White Knoll on a roll as it takes on Lexington on Friday. C1CLEMSON CLIPS WAKE

Tigers rally in fourth quarter to put game away, C1

INTERSTELLAR: ONE OF TRIO OF BLOCKBUSTER MOVIES OPENING FRIDAY, E1

The State

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 2014 | THESTATE.COM

'If anyone deserves a home...'

Veteran Marc Carroll and his family received the keys to their newly renovated home Thursday.

Vet, family benefit from nonprofit's, bank's generosity

By JEFF WILKINSON
jwilkinson@thestate.com

Marc Carroll spent 13 years in the military, first in the Air Force and then in the Army.

He was deployed to Saudi Arabia and Kuwait after the First Gulf War, then to Afghanistan in the wake of 9/11. But after repeated deployments to South America from 2006 to 2009 as part of a U.S. effort to battle narco-terrorists, he felt he had to leave the service to help his wife, Angela, raise their four children, including middle child Brandon, who is autistic.

With Marc now working installing cabinets and saddled with expenses related to Brandon's condition, the Carrolls thought they would never be able to afford a home of their own. That changed Thursday, when the family was handed the keys to a three-bedroom, 1,500-square-foot house in Northeast Richland – newly remodeled and mortgage-free.

"It's a surreal moment," said Carroll, 39, as tears streamed down his face. "We've been living paycheck-to-paycheck for so long. Now I can put something away for retirement."

SEE HOME PAGE A8

AT THESTATE.COM

See a gallery of photos with this story online.

Wayne Lamon hugs Carroll in front of his family's new mortgage-free home.

GERRY REILLY/DIGITAL FIRST MEDIA/THESTATE.COM

CLEMSON TRAGEDY

Questions remain in student's death

How did he end up in lake? Was he impaired?

By HARRISON CAJILL
hcajill@thestate.com

A month after the death of 19-year-old Clemson student Tucker Hippo, questions remain about how he ended up in a lake outside the college campus.

Did Hippo fall from a bridge on S.C. 93 during an early morning run with members of his new fraternity? Was he impaired? Could he have been helped?

Jimmy Watt, an Oconee County Sheriff's Office spokesman, said the investigation of Hippo's death is continuing and there will be no new information released until it reaches a conclusion.

"As we have said previously, there is no timetable for the completion of the investigation and releasing our final report," Watt said.

Thom Berry, a State Law Enforcement Division spokesman, said the agency's toxicology tests requested by the sheriff's department are incomplete. A series of initial tests are run during a toxicology report, he said, and depending on those results, additional testing and verifica-

SEE STUDENT PAGE A5

Former Navy SEAL: I killed bin Laden

An ex-Navy SEAL confirms he fired the two fatal shots into the head of Osama bin Laden. He says he agonized for months over whether to go public. Page A9

dealsaver®

First-timer takes all right steps

Boeing on track to meet Dreamliner deliveries for year. BUSINESS, B2

Tigers put to the test

SPORTS, C1

The Post and Courier

THE SOUTH'S OLDEST DAILY NEWSPAPER • FOUNDED 1803

FRIDAY, November 7, 2014

POSTANDCOURIER.COM

Charleston, North Charleston, S.C. ★ ★ $1.00

Yellow jacket palace creates buzz in Berkeley

Nest in old camper might be biggest cleared in S.C.

BY BO PETERSEN
bope@postandcourier.com

Robert McDougal didn't dare move as the swarms of yellow jackets kept coming. The wasps swarmed from a monstrous nest hidden in the folded camper he had just hoisted in the air with a forklift.

"I sat in the chair with my arms

Video
For a video from the nest removal,
go to postandcourier.com/videos like this (crouched) for about 20 minutes. I was scared!" he said.

He ought to have been, but somehow he didn't get stung.

The nest cleared Tuesday was perhaps the largest to be cleared in South Carolina and one of the largest in the region. The pulp of it, an estimated 10 feet by 7 feet and 2 feet tall, was enough to stuff the interior of an old Volkswagen Beetle.

Eric "Critter" McCool, of McCool Wildlife Services, had to

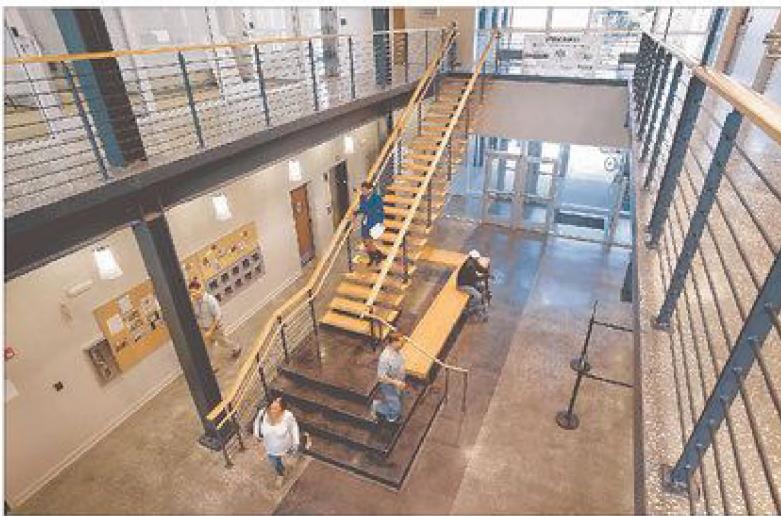

Please see NEST, Page A1.

Bee extractor Eric "Critter" McCool removed from a Berkeley County camper one of the largest yellow jacket nests to be cleared in the region.
PROVIDED

One-Eighty Place a big turnaround for shelter

Downtown nonprofit to care for homeless in spacious new building

One-Eighty Place, Charleston's new 30,000-square-foot, $6.5 million homeless shelter is celebrating its grand opening.

BY ROBERT BEHRE
robehre@postandcourier.com

One of Charleston's newest new homes was built for those without one.

The 30,000-square-foot, $6.5 million building for One-Eighty Place — formerly known as Crisis Ministries — will have its public unveiling Friday morning.

The spacious new shelter at 35 Walmart St. likely will come as a big surprise to those who haven't been staying there — they first began moving into the building in August — or who haven't played a role in supporting downtown's homeless nonprofit.

Please see SHELTER, Page A1.

Gallery
For more photos, go to postandcourier.com/galleries

It was built on a dead-end road directly behind the existing shelter but cannot be seen from Meeting Street.

For an organization dedicated to turning homeless people around 180 degrees to live meaningful, productive lives, the new building represents a complete transformation from the cramped former automobile warehouse

ROBERT BEHRE/MSTAFF

Bunk beds at the new shelter came from the old Navy base.

White vote shift a disaster for Dems

Capturing biggest share of minorities no longer enough

BY JENNIFER AGIESTA
and JESSE J. HOLLAND
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — White voters of all ages were less likely to back Democrats this year than in elections past, helping Republicans nationwide but most acutely in the South — and overpowering Democratic efforts to turn out their core supporters among blacks and Hispanics.

In a nation growing ever more diverse, political forecasters repeatedly warn Republicans they must improve their appeal among minorities in order to remain competitive in the long term.

But for the Democrats, dominating the vote among minorities enough to win elections today — and it would be in the future if the GOP is able to run up similar margins among whites, who still make up a majority of voters in every state.

"The rule of thumb was Democrats could win with 90 percent of the African-American vote and 40 percent of the white vote," said Merle Black, a political science professor at Emory University in Atlanta.

"But now very few Democrats could think about getting 40 percent of the white vote. They're trying to go 30 percent. In the Deep South states, from South Carolina to Louisiana, it's very hard for the Democratic candidate to get 25 percent of the white vote."

Nationally, Republicans running for seats in the U.S. House won 60 percent

Please see VOTE, Page A11

For full statewide and county results from Tuesday's election, go to postandcourier.com/election-results.

that the Supreme Court will take up the issue.

George W. Bush appointee, while a Bill Clinton appointee disagreed.

The ruling concluded that states have the right to set rules for marriage and that such change as expanding a definition of marriage that dates "back to the earliest days of human history" is better done through political processes.

"When the courts do not let the people resolve new social issues like this one, they perpetuate the idea that the heroes in these change events are judges and lawyers," Sotomayor wrote, adding that it's better to have change "in which the people, gay and straight alike, become the heroes of their own stories by meeting each other not as adversaries in a court system but as fellow citizens seeking to resolve a new social issue in a fair-minded way."

Cincinnati attorney Al Gerhardstein, who represented gay plaintiffs in two cases in which he gained lower-court victories, said he will appeal to the Supreme Court.

Please see MARRIAGE, Page A1.

U.S. Supreme Court likely next stop after gay marriage hits snag

BY DAN SEWELL
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — The expanding legal acceptance of same-sex marriage in the United States hit a roadblock on Thursday when a federal appeals court panel upheld anti-gay marriage laws in four states, making it more likely that the Supreme Court will take up the issue.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel that heard arguments on gay marriage bans or restrictions in Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee on Aug. 6 split 2-1, with Circuit Judge Jeffrey Sutton writing the majority opinion for himself and a fellow

Judge — 67 Crossword — D6,B8 People — G1
Botters — E2 Editors — A12 Sports — C1
Classified — E1 Movies — Q4 Television — P5
Comics — D6,C8 Obituaries — S4 The South — S1

Charleston Cup

Charleston Cup Admission Package for Four.
See A2

Char-
High 66, Low 49;
Complete 5-day
forecast, B8

Game of the Week – North Augusta at South Aiken – Kickoff at 7:30 p.m. – More, 7-8A

Fox Creek High falls to St. Joseph's | Sports, 1B

Clemson beats Wake Forest, 1B

Final score:
Clemson 34
Wake Forest 20

Aiken Standard

YOUR LOCAL NEWS SOURCE SINCE 1867

FRIDAY, November 7, 2014

AIKENSTANDARD.COM

Vol. 148, No. 311 Aiken, S.C. ★★ 75¢

Man challenges City ordinance

BY TEDDY KULMALA
tkulmala@aikenstandard.com

An Aiken man challenging the constitutionality of a City ordinance is taking his case to the S.C. Supreme Court, which will hear arguments in the case next month.

Larry Daniel Smith is challenging the constitutionality of Aiken City Code Chapter 22, Article I, Section 22-3(b), which designates criteria for charging someone with failure to comply with a public safety officer.

Smith pleaded guilty in 2013 to a General Sessions charge of pointing and presenting a firearm, and was found guilty by a municipal court jury on charges of disorderly conduct and failure to comply.

Smith seeks to have his conviction on the latter charge overturned because the ordinance for the charge is "vague and/or overbroad," according to court documents.

Background

The Aiken Department of Public Safety received a 911 call on Jan. 17, 2013, from a "hysterical" woman at a home on Union Street, according to an order denying appeal filed Sept. 27, 2013.

Please see GIT, Page 14A

INSIDE TODAY

Brenda's Angels continue to fight pancreatic cancer

Local News, 2A

Exit survey documents social, political viewpoints

Local News, 3A

In 'Big Hero 6,' Disney does Marvel Living on the Go, 1C

AREA DEATHS

Michael K. Heaton, Aiken
Robert Blair McNair, Aiken
Ruth K. Gibson, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Deaths and Funerals, 6A

WEATHER

Area school honors veterans

BY ROB NOVIT
rnovit@aikenstandard.com

Vernon Holmes was delighted and honored to attend Leavelle McCampbell Middle School's Veterans Day observance on Thursday.

"It's important to be here," he said. "I see these young children and how they conducted themselves in a very gracious way."

The guest speaker was 1st Sgt. Jason Holland, of Ft. Gordon, who trains NCOs as the future of the Army.

"I loved the Marines and what the first sergeant had to say," Holmes said.

His granddaughter, Jennifer Lyle, and his great-grandson, Leyton Watson, a Leavelle student, welcomed Holmes and his wife, Brenda.

"They show up for everything," said Lyle. "This gives us a chance to honor them and that's great."

Brenda also is a military veteran, having spent 1968-74 in the Air Force.

"I wanted to go to college, and my parents couldn't afford for me to go," she said. "I love my country, and I was honored to serve."

The program included music by the school's chorus, directed by Charla Coffin, and the band, led by Zachary Derr. The chorus selections included "Our America" and "Grateful to Be American." The band's performance included "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Principal Johnny Spears said he couldn't thank the veterans in attendance enough for their service to the country.

"There are still those who are overseas, serving us to enjoy the lives we live today," Spears said.

Abigail Ruff, a Leavelle student, said her grandfather, Mike Ruff, attends the program every year.

"It's very exciting, because I get to come over and see him," she said. "It's really cool."

Ruff served in the Navy during the Vietnam War, and "I would do it again," he said. "I'm glad to be here with my granddaughter. I didn't think I would, but I checked up with all of this. It's really nice."

Holland spoke with the students

At the Leavelle McCampbell Middle School Veterans Day observance on Thursday, Vernon Holmes, left, a Vietnam veteran, talks with the guest speaker, 1st Sgt. Jason Holland, who is stationed at Ft. Gordon.

These Leavelle McCampbell Middle School chorus members perform patriotic selections during a Veterans Day observance on Thursday – among them "Grateful to Be American."

County attorney turns in resignation

BY MAAYAN SCHECHTER
mschechter@aikenstandard.com

Aiken County Attorney Lawrence

I won't go into reasons ... but he was a Council employee and he felt

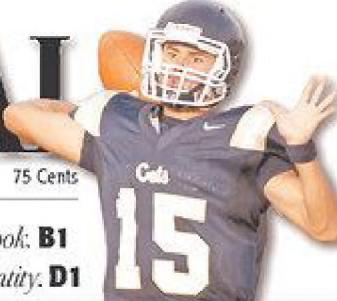

THE JOURNAL

Follow us on Twitter  @UpstateTodaySC

Vol. 110 No. 221

Friday, November 7, 2014

75 Cents

HIGH SCHOOL GAMEDAY

Local high school squads hit long road for playoffs
tonight. C1

CREATIVE LICENSE: Author turns husband's childhood tale into picture book. B1
SECRET REVEALED: Navy SEAL who shot bin Laden goes public with identity. D1

LATE-BREAKING

REX BROWN | THE JOURNAL

Clemson freshman receiver Artavis Scott breaks away for a touchdown in front of Wake Forest defenders Brandon Chubb (48) and Ryan Janvier during the Tigers' 34-20 road win on Thursday night. Scott's touchdown — on a 68-yard shovel pass from quarterback Cole Stoudt — broke a 20-20 tie early in the fourth quarter before the Tigers added another late score on a 30-yard run by fellow freshman Wayne Gallman to ice the win. For full coverage of the game, turn to page C3.

Gillespie speaks candidly at final meeting

BY GREG OLIVER
THE JOURNAL

EASLEY — Outgoing Pickens County School Board trustee Jimmy Gillespie attended his final meeting last week, and he didn't go out quietly.

"There's not enough people that hate me, so I'm going to see what I can do tonight," Gillespie said prior to

JESSICA NEUMANN | THE JOURNAL

Ray Cash of Seneca fills up on Thursday at the Ingles gas station, where the price for a gallon of regular unleaded was $2.65. AAA said gas prices in the Seneca area have dropped almost 40 cents since last year.

Falling gas prices fuel holiday cheers

BY CARLOS CALARZA-VEVE
THE JOURNAL

SENECA — Shelby Clark was not feeling any pain

Clark got an even better deal on her purchase, because she used a local supermarket's bonus card that reduced the price simply embracing the moment.

"I hope it stays this way," Clark said. "It really helps with the holidays coming."

Researchers defend exit poll on race

BY NORMAN CANNADA
THE JOURNAL

SENECA — While some voters in Seneca and other areas in South Carolina saw an exit poll Tuesday as racially offensive, the two men who led the effort to conduct the poll said they were just trying to prove race was not a factor in choosing candidates.

Woodard

White

Clemson professor Dave Woodard and Paul White, a graduate student in the political science department at the University of South Carolina, said Tuesday's poll was designed to look at the issue of race in politics in light of the fact Tim Scott on Tuesday became the first African-American popularly elected to the U.S. Senate from the South.

"We're testing the literature in political science that says most voters vote for racial reasons," Woodard said.

"We believe people vote on the basis of personality and issues. We think we saw that. Tim Scott was the largest vote getter in the state. We had to ask the questions to find out about symbolic racism."

Questions in the poll drew criticism from people who saw the poll at the Shaver Recreation Complex in Seneca and other locations across the state. After a few typical exit poll questions about how people voted, three questions seemed to draw the most concern. The first asked people to agree or disagree on the issue of whether "blacks are getting too demanding in their push for equal rights." Another asked readers to agree or disagree on the statement, "If blacks would only try

SEE EXIT POLL, PAGE A8

Airport contractor paid verdict amount

BY CARLOS CALARZA-VEVE
THE JOURNAL

WALHALLA — Plateau Excavation Inc. is almost $900,000 richer after getting "fully paid" from a recent judgment rendered by a jury in a case involving a runway project at Oconee County Regional Airport.

"The case is over," David James, the Atlanta attorney who represented Plateau, said Thursday after confirming his client had been paid.

SLOW START, QUICK FINISH

Clemson picks up win against
Wake Forest, 34-20 B1

Partly sunny, cool
High 61
Low 34

FRIDAY

NOVEMBER 7, 2014
SPARTANBURG, S.C.
50 cents

Herald-Journal

www.GoUpstate.com

HJ
IN A HURRY

5 Things to read today

Picture this

One of Spartanburg's most picturesque places is the subject of an upcoming photography contest and exhibit at Wofford College. PAGE C1

Restaurateur dies

Walter Holmes, the founder of Holmes Hot Dogs who was famous for helping those in need and letting customers without enough money to pay do so on their next visit, died Wednesday. He was 88. PAGE C1

Gay marriage snag

The march toward gay marriage across the U.S. hit a roadblock Thursday when a federal appeals court upheld laws against the practice in four states, creating a split in the legal system that increases the chances the Supreme Court will decide the issue. PAGE A3

FluMist limitations

The nasal spray version of the flu vaccine did not protect young children against swine flu last winter and might not work again this year, health officials said Thursday. PAGE A5

SEAL breaks silence

The retired Navy SEAL who says he shot Osama bin Laden in the forehead publicly identified himself Thursday amid a debate among special operations brethren about whether they should break silence about their secret missions. PAGE A4

On the Web

Visit Collegiate.com for breaking

Immigration poses dilemma for GOP

Party could risk alienating Hispanics if opposition to Obama plan grows strident

By MICHAEL J. MISHAK

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With President Barack Obama vowing to press ahead on immigration, prominent Hispanic Republicans are worried about the reaction of staunch conservatives. They fear it will harm the party's ability to win over Latinos in the next presidential election and beyond.

While immigration was generally a muted issue in midterm elections dominated by the GOP, Obama promised the next day to move ahead on his own to remove the threat of deportation or grant work permits to an unspecified number of immigrants living here illegally.

"The initial reaction from Republicans is going to be very ugly and not well thought out, unfortunately," said Alfonso Aguilar, former chief of the U.S. Office of Citizenship in the George W. Bush administration and executive director of Latino Partnership for Conservative Principles.

Aguilar said congressional Republicans must offer a plausible alternative to the president's plan, especially since the GOP-controlled House has shelved bipartisan immigration legislation. His call echoes those of some of the party's potential 2016 candidates to reach out to Hispanic voters in some way.

"Just saying 'let's repeal this,' or 'let's not fund it' — if that's the only reaction, that's going to antagonize

◆ SEE IMMIGRATION PAGE A6

FINDING A FUTURE WITH PROJECT SEARCH

ALEX HICKS JR./ALEX.HICKS@SHJ.COM

Tyler Smith is participating in Project Search, a program that places special needs students in businesses where they can learn skills to help them find a job.

Job skills program gives hope to students

By KIM KIMZEY

Kim.Kimzev@shj.com

Along with job skills, students with disabilities are gaining self-esteem and hope through a new program.

Spartanburg Regional Healthcare System, Spartanburg County School District 6 and the state Department of Vocational Rehabilitation have launched Project Search.

The program helps students with developmental disabilities transition from school to work and gain skills that will help them find employment, said Alan Eggert, District 6 executive director for special services.

Seven Doerman High School students will

Eggert said it's the first Project Search program in South Carolina — more than 250 programs are internationally offered.

Eggert said after learning the impact Project Search could have on students, District 6 Superintendent Darryl Owings wanted to offer it.

"The District 6 goal is for all students to be college-, career- and citizenship-ready, and this is an opportunity for our students to thrive," Eggert said.

Project Search program instructor Sam Napier said each student acts as an intern in various hospital departments. Areas include environmental services, guest services and rise with the realization they can accomplish tasks and that others look beyond their disability, focusing on their job skills.

"They all want a job. They want to work. They don't want to just sit at home, which happens to a lot of students," Napier said.

Not having a diploma closes many doors, he said. The program is giving interns hope that they can find employment.

"You've had this little tunnel and there's a little bitty light at the end ... Now, all of a sudden, that tunnel's become a gigantic hallway with a lot more light," Napier said.

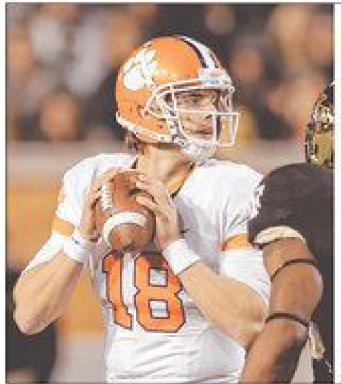

Monica Copelton assists in sterile processing, where she uses a hand-held machine to

the Sumter ITEM

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 2014 75 CENTS
SERVING SOUTH CAROLINA SINCE OCTOBER 15, 1894

2 SECTIONS, 24 PAGES | VOL. 120, NO. 21

SPORTS

Tigers return to action, take on Wake Forest B1

SCIENCE

Disguised penguin cam helps spy on animals A6

OPINION

Voters show they want better days for all A13

DEATHS, B5 and B7

Frank R. Phillips	Lottie W. Williams
Ethel Muldrow	Holmes N. Smith Jr.
Marguritte Dukes	Henry Marschall
Mildred J. Sumter	Malachi O. Wilson
Tommy Goodman	Herbert A. Mickens
Johnny Williams	Carolyn Jones
Renea Hood	Mary Louise Brabham
Rosa Anthony	Ruth Washington
Geneva W. Overstreet

WEATHER, A14

A LITTLE COOLER

Partly sunny, breezy and cooler; chilly tonight.
HIGH 65, LOW 38

INSIDE

Classifieds B8
Comics B6
Lotteries A14
Opinion A13
Television A11

CONTACT US

Info: 774-1200
Advertising: 774-1237
Classifieds: 774-1234
Delivery: 774-1258
News and Sports:
774-1226

VISIT US ONLINE AT theitem.com

? 90534 00001 9

Health centers join campaign to plead for funding extension

Trust fund will expire in 2015 for care providers

BY JADE REYNOLDS

jade@theitem.com

Local community health centers are joining a national campaign to encourage their congressional delegations to enact legislation before a funding deadline leaves them underfunded.

Sandhills Medical Foundation Inc. in Sumter, along with Sumter

Family Health Center, HopeHealth in Clarendon County and CareSouth in Lee County, are answering the call of National Association of Community Health Centers to flood congressional inboxes with requests to extend funding to their programs.

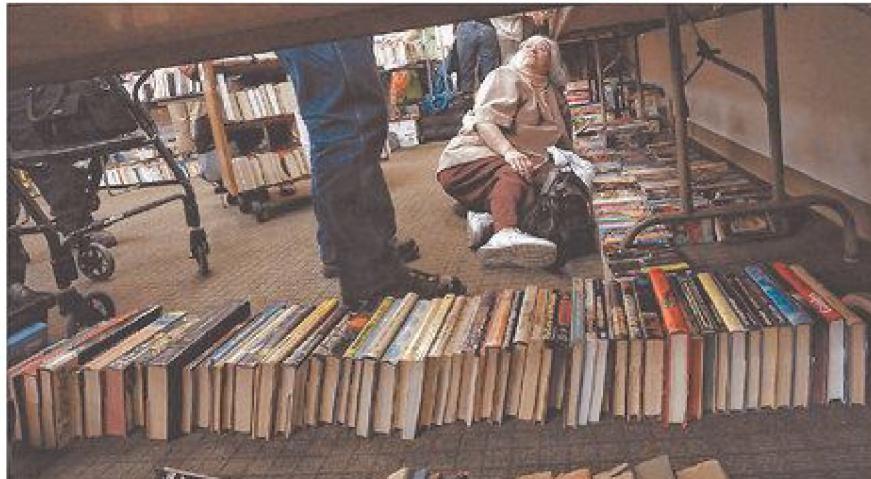

When the Affordable Care Act passed, a five-year trust fund was created to allow such medical homes to serve nearly 20 million new patients across the country. But a cut to the discretionary funding of the community health centers left them drawing from the trust fund to maintain — not expand — services, according to the national association's campaign. At the end of fiscal year 2015, the trust fund will be gone, and the providers of primary care may face as much as a 70 percent cut in their federal funding.

The email campaign urges Congress to act before the deadline,

SEE CAMPAIGN, PAGE A12

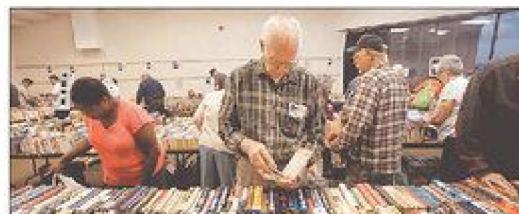

Library's annual book sale begins

CATHY PRICE, above, lies on the floor of Sumter County Library to get a better look at the sci-fi books at the annual Friends of the Sumter County Library Annual Book Sale, which started on Thursday night.

MARGARET ANN RIVERS, left, carries a stack of books out of the sale Thursday.

ART RAINOR, below, looks at books at the sale on Thursday night. The sale continues today from 4 to 8 p.m.; Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Nov. 13 and 14 from 4 to 8 p.m.; and Nov. 15 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The final day of the sale, Sunday, Nov. 16, is Bag O'Books Day, when shoppers can fill bags provided by the Friends for $5 per bag. There is no charge for admission to the sale at any time. The library is at 111 N. Harvin St., next to Sumter County Administration Building.

Murder conviction in 2008 case reversed

BY MATT BRUCE

matt@theitem.com

State justices on Wednesday reversed the conviction of a Sumter County man found guilty of murder and sentenced to life in prison in 2011.

The South Carolina Court of Appeals issued the ruling granting Daniel Jackson a new trial. Appellate judges remanded Jackson's case back down to the circuit-court level to be retried.

A jury found the 26-year-old Sumter man guilty of murder and armed robbery in August 2011, and Circuit Court Judge W. Jeffrey Young issued him a life sentence.

Jackson's attorneys successfully argued that the original trial violated his 6th Amendment right of confrontation because Young allowed jurors to hear redacted statements from his co-defendant Reginald Carty, who testified during the trial. Appellate justices ruled that the statements unjustly incriminated Jackson while not giving him the opportunity to cross examine his accuser.

The state appeals court heard the case June 10 and filed its 23-page opinion Wednesday.

The ruling stemmed from the killing of William Flexon, a 46-year-old Sumter man who was shot twice Jan. 12, 2008, as he delivered pizzas to OC Mobile Home Park in Cherryvale. Deputies apprehended Carty, then 16, near the shooting scene shortly afterward, and he subsequently gave officers six statements during the span of the next 13 days.

In those statements, he

SEE CASE, PAGE A12

NEWS: Red Foxes Oyster Roast this weekend, 4A

THE HARTSVILLE MESSENGER

Darlington County's News Leader Since 1893

50 CENTS

scnow.com

FRIDAY NOVEMBER 7, 2014

WWW.HARTSVILLEMESSINGER.COM

Upsets mark Darlington County school board races

BY JIM FAILE

jfaile@hartsvillemesseger.com

DARLINGTON — The Darlington County Board of Education will have some new faces on it when the candidates who won in Tuesday's school board election take office. Voters elected school board members in Districts 1, 3,

Baldwin
5 and 7.
Former
Darlington
County Council Chairman

Dawson
District 3

Hassler
Tom Henson of Darlington upset two-term incumbent
Joyce Wing.

Heitsman got just over 11
percent.

In the race for the District 3 seat, former long-time school board member Thelma Dawson of Darlington defeated two-term incumbent Joyce Wing,

Thomas of Darlington with nearly 57 percent of the vote to 43 percent for Thomas.

In District 5, political newcomer Maureen Thomas of Hartsville won with just over 43 percent of the vote. Former Darlington County Fire District Chief David Williamson of Hartsville came away with 35 percent of the vote. Jesse Addison of Hartsville got just over 21 percent of the vote.

Longtime board member Tommy Jeffords did not seek re-election in District 5.

And in District 7, Wanda Hassler of Hartsville ran

See BOARD, Page 3A

Darlington County

District to challenge federal rating

BY CHRISTOPHER MCKAGEN
cmckagen@fornews.com

DARLINGTON — The Darlington County School District will challenge its federal report card issued Oct. 21 under federal law by the S.C. Board of Education. The district will request an audit of exceptional education students claiming errors in calculation methods and calculation in general.

However, 41 South Carolina school districts since 2012, not necessarily all unique, filed 72 appeals of the federal report cards, known officially as ESEA accountability reports. Only one of those appeals was affirmed. That case came out of Anderson School District 5 where a grade was "mistakenly issued at a grade level that did not have test scores in place yet," according to the state department.

Darlington County received a "C" this year on its overall report. That grade is down from a "B" in 2013, but is still considered to have met state expectations for student performance. Eddie Ingram, Darlington County superintendent, issued a statement regarding the district's appeal.

"Let me be very clear: the Darlington County School District has a great deal of work to do," Ingram wrote. "That said, we believe there are problems in the manner in which the federal report card is calculated. We have been working with the state department in the hopes of resolving some of the issues, particularly those involving the calculations of scores for our exceptional education students."

The district believes a "1 percent flexibility rule" used this year by the state did not fairly represent the testing success of its exceptional needs students. The rule states that if more than 1 percent of the students who

Heitsman got just over 11
percent.

WEST HARTSVILLE

PHOTOS BY ARDIE ARVIDSON/HARTSVILLE MESSENGER

Students at West Hartsville Elementary School listen in Wednesday on a program explaining the city of Hartsville's recycling initiative and facts about recycling.

Students kick off recycling program

BY ARDIE ARVIDSON
arvidson@hartsvillemesseger.com

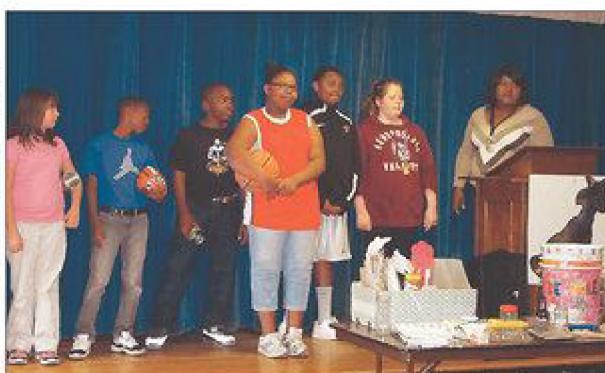

West Hartsville Elementary School kicked off its participation in the city of Hartsville's recycling program Wednesday.

Students in the sponsoring BETA Club performed a skit for their peers about recycling and Jane Hiller, education specialist at the Sonoco Recycling Plant in Columbia, spoke to the children about the importance of recycling and what can be recycled. Hartsville City Manager Natalie Zeigler welcomed the school into the city's recycling program.

Sonoco Recycling, a unit of Sonoco, is a sponsor of the city's program. The company collects more than 3 million tons of material each year.

Hiller said the three "Rs" — reduce, reuse and recycle — are the key to reducing the planet's garbage. She said America is the "Garbage Capital of the World."

She told the students Americans produce more garbage than any other country. In explaining what they can do to computer paper, writing on both sides of their notebook pages and using only one paper towel when drying their hands.

Members of the West Hartsville Elementary School BETA Club present a skit Wednesday about recycling at the kick off of their recycling program.

She told them to think about ways they could reuse items instead of throwing and gave the students examples of things that can and can not be recycled. Paper and cardboard can be recycled, she said, but used tissue paper, small pieces of paper, paper plates and cups cannot.

See SCHOOLS, Page 3A

CLEMSON PULLS AWAY FROM WAKE. B1

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 2014

The Times and Democrat

75 CENTS • ORANGEBURG, SOUTH CAROLINA |

TheTandD.com

3 SECTIONS, 36 PAGES • VOL. 153 • NO. 311

VINTAGE ORANGEBURG COUNTY

Orangeburg still has its first mechanized and motorized fire pumper which it bought for $12,000 in 1920. To see more photographs of the pumper and video of the siren being cranked, visit this story at TheTandD.com.

NUMBER 1: City's first motorized fire pumper waits to serve Orangeburg again

By RICHARD WALKER
T&D Staff Writer

She sits quietly inside a bay, sharing living quarters with her much younger sisters. With brass fittings and vintage pressure gauges, her age is obvious at first glance but she still gives off an air of unspoken dignity.

There's no need to argue her honor; she doesn't need anyone to argue she has done her duty. She's the city's first-ever mechanized and motorized fire pumper — Number 1.

The city of Orangeburg took possession of the pumper in August 1920 after placing the $12,000 order a few months earlier. With the ability to toss out 1,000 gallons of water a minute, the pumper was the creme-de-la-creme of fire-fighting apparatus.

PROJECT SPONSOR

The Orangeburg unit is missing a few pieces but still retains a "Moto Meter," which was attached to the radiator. It served not only as an attractive hood ornament but to warn firemen when the engine's vital cooling water became too hot.

Under the double-opening hood, it's got six big cylinders and used them all. Each was once fired by a triple ignition system. The redundant systems were put in place to make certain help got to where it was needed.

Orangeburg Department of Public Safety Engineer Steve Mundaugh said the engine is a whopping 821 cubic inches mated to a three-speed transmission. That produces just over 100 horsepower which could propel the pumper's wood-spoked wheels at 40 miles per hour on 1920s rough and tumble roads, with one person driving, another manually turning the Sterling-band fire siren, and up

See VINTAGE, A6

A NEW 100 DAYS

The T&D series "100 Objects in 100 Days," which concluded in September, opened the door to lots of reader interest in the history of Orangeburg County. Today, we begin another journey: "Vintage Orangeburg County." In the new 100-day series, look for more of the stories about people, places, objects and "things" that continue telling the story of Orangeburg County.

By SEANNA ADCOX
Associated Press

COLUMBIA — Gov. Nikki Haley said Thursday she's optimistic about getting ethics reform through the South Carolina Legislature next year.

The newly re-elected Republican governor said the Legislature feels pressure following former House Speaker Bobby Haneff's guilty plea to campaign spending violations. As part of his deal, the Charleston Republican agreed to help in any other investigations into legislative wrongdoing.

Since 2012, lawmakers of both parties have called strengthening the state's weak ethics laws a top priority. But, while they created lots of study committees, nothing cleared both chambers. A bill died in the Senate earlier this year after being stripped of any changes to the current system of legislative committees overseeing legislators' campaign filings and handling ethics complaints against their own members.

Haley, whose 2012 clearing by the House Ethics Committee renewed public calls for ethics reform, has since insisted that efforts include

See GOVERNOR, A6

'IT IS LIFESAVING'

Morning News

FRIDAY NOVEMBER 7, 2014

www.sctnow.com

The Voice of the Pee Dee

75 cents

TODAY'S WEATHER

Partly sunny, breezy and cooler, high 65, low 37

DETAILS 2A

Florence County

Energy savings will exceed costs for upgrades

BY GAVIN JACKSON
Morning News
gjackson@florencecountynews.com

FLORENCE — A Florence County Council committee approved a guaranteed energy-savings performance plan that will reduce the county's current $1.8 million annual energy bill by nearly 24 percent through multimillion-dollar efficiency upgrades.

On Thursday morning, administration and finance committee members voted to recommend an energy-savings package to the council that will yield $431,183 in annual savings over the next 15 years to finance building upgrades.

This comes after the council approved a memorandum of understanding with Pepco Energy Services this summer to conduct an investment-grade energy audit of county facilities and the introduction of an ordinance on the matter in October.

Eric Crawford, with Pepco, presented information to members on a plan that would save the county $6.4 million in energy costs (at current rates) during the next 15 years. The council then can spend $5.76 million on energy-efficient building upgrades.

See SAVINGS, Page 4A

A salute to veterans

PHOTO BY CONWAY MORNING NEWS

Army veteran John Wagner (right) salutes chaplain Kristal McKey after he received a flag pin in recognition of his service Thursday in Bethel Baptist Retirement Community's Fellowship Hall as part of a ceremony for veterans. "It's so important that we never forget the sacrifices the soldiers make," McKey said.

Florence Christian students show appreciation

FLORENCE — Florence Christian School said thank you to veterans from all around the Pee Dee on Thursday as part of its "Salute To Veterans" production at the Florence Baptist Temple.

Each year, students from all grade levels pay tribute to veterans through musical productions.

This is the eighth year for the production, and school principal Jim Berry said the event teaches students about our country's history.

"We want to teach our

Florence Christian School students salute Thursday during their performance during a "Salute to Veterans" production at the Florence Baptist Temple. The annual event honors veterans and their families from the community.

students that the freedom we have isn't free," Berry said.

"Not many people recognize veterans today, so this is our chance to reach out to them and show appreciation for what they did for our country."

— JOHN D. RUSSELL

Veterans recognized at Bethel Baptist

DARLINGTON — Dozens of veterans and wives of veterans were recognized Thursday afternoon during a flag-pinning ceremony in the Bethel Baptist Retirement Community chapel.

Veterans from the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines and National Guard were recognized at the ceremony.

"It put tears in my eyes sometimes," veteran Phil Arndt said. "It makes me feel honored."

He attended the ceremony with his wife of 50 years, Ruby.

The Rev. Daniel Pierce, chaplain Kristal McKey and Karen Diefendorf helped conduct the ceremony.

A chorus from the Florence Christian School and Air Force Junior ROTC members from West Florence High School also took part in the ceremony.

"It's so important that we never forget the sacrifices the soldiers make," McKey said.

— VEASEY CONWAY

Franklin Briggs

Florence loses a friend

BY TRACI BRIDGES
Morning News
Tbridge@florencecountynews.com

FLORENCE — For the first time in decades, a constant at the Florence County Election Commission Office was missing as election results came in Tuesday night.

The Rev. Franklin Briggs, a community and political activist known by many in political circles throughout the Pee Dee as "The Statistician," was at an area hospital fighting for his life. He died Wednesday at age 56.

"Oh, people were definitely asking where he was," his sister Deborah Cooper said. "I stopped by the office to let them know he was in the hospital and wouldn't be there. He was actually doing good Tuesday, but on Wednesday afternoon, he took a turn for the worse. We were all there with him. He never spoke after that or showed any improvement, and about five minutes before 11 last night, he just closed his eyes."

A 1978 graduate of South Florence High School and 1982 graduate of Benedict College, Briggs began working in politics at a young age. He had a degree in mathematics and loved statistics, so he quickly combined his two passions.

"He loved being a statistician and managing the numbers," Cooper said. "He loved politics, and he's always been great at math, so he was the numbers guy on campaigns."

And over the years, he worked on many throughout the Pee Dee, from the local to the state level.

"He's worked with so many different people," Cooper said. "Maggie

Brian Symmes
Cell: 803-673-9437
Office: 803-734-0304