richards_jm Been there a couple times, ain't never seen that monster. Old enough to have been there for the battle? Witness tree?

ranger.dawn @richards_jm, The osage orange trees that are similar in size that we have had to remove are barely more than 200 years old, and date to the time when William, son of Edward Musgrove owned the place. This beautiful old tree is on the British Camp Trail, and is very close to where the grist mill was situated.
