Fathers Make a Difference

The time a parent spends with a child helps develop that child's sense of belonging. It lets the child know that he or she is cared for and that what he or she does matters to you. Unfortunately, many fathers miss out on their children's activities for one reason or another, but it's important to remember that spending time with your children can yield big dividends.

You'll have a great time together too. By being an active participant in your children's lives, you can help them develop better self-esteem and grow educationally. Here are a few tips:

Attend different school activities with your children. Take time to watch a volleyball practice or listen to a vocal ensemble. Let your youngsters know you are proud of them.

Be careful with your emotions. Remember, activities are for fun, not just for winning.

Be involved with your children's education. Meet the teacher and offer support. Help your children develop a positive outlook toward the teacher and the school.

Remember to educate your children about life. Talk with them about a variety of subjects, and be willing to listen to their problems about school and home.

Read to your children. Show them they are loved and that education is a vital process.

Spending time with your children assures them that you genuinely care about them and want the best for them—and teaches them to do the same with their children one day.
