Subject: RE: Keeping the Republic: Power and Citizenship in American Politics

Hello Chaney:

Apologies for the error in my message. It was, as you might imagine, intended for Governor Haley; Secretary Kerry is one of several other public figures we are contacting for the project in a fairly compressed timeline.

I know the authors, Christine and Jerry, would love to speak to Governor Haley in particular, as she represents better than most their stated aim of showing the diversity of political participation across gender, race, ethnicity, and political ideology. I'm sure her status as the youngest currently-serving governor in the United States would also serve as an inspiration to our audience. With, again, apologies for my email gaffe, might we be able to discuss this project in more detail?

Best,

Zachary Hoskins

Zachary,

In response to your email below, I am unsure of Secretary Kerry's availability, I imagine his press or scheduling office would be your best resource.

Thanks for reaching out,

Chaney Adams
Press Secretary
Office of Governor Nikki Haley

Hello:

My name is Zachary Hoskins, and I am an editorial assistant at CQ Press, an imprint of SAGE Publications and a leader in producing books for college political science courses. One of our most successful books is Keeping the Republic: Power and Citizenship in American Politics, by Christine Barbour and Gerald Wright of Indiana University: an introductory text that has been used by tens of thousands of students in universities and colleges across the country. For the next (eighth) edition, to be published in January 2017, we would like to include a brief interview with Secretary Kerry in our Profiles in Citizenship feature.

Profiles in Citizenship is a feature meant to provide inspiring models of citizen participation and show the diversity of this participation across gender, race, ethnicity, and political ideology. These profiles are a powerful way to show students, many of whom are just starting to become politically active, what it means to engage in politics and serve the public. In the current edition of the book (which I'd be happy to send to you), we include profiles of such figures as Condoleeza Rice, Susana Martinez, Newt Gingrich, and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Would it be possible to schedule a brief meeting to further discuss this text and feature? I'm happy to answer any questions you might have; please contact me by phone at (202) 729-1441.

Kind regards,

Zachary Hoskins
