"WHAT'S THE LEAD, AP?"

In this May 30, 2016 photo, Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., speaks during a Phoenix Memorial Day Ceremony at the Memorial Cemetery of Arizona in Phoenix. Donald Trump's refusal to back McCain and others in the party for re-election is a remarkable breach of political decorum, but one that matches in some way their own hesitance to fully back their nominee for president. Trump taunts GOP, refusing to back Ryan, McCain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald Trump is openly taunting the leaders of his own party by refusing to endorse House Speaker Paul Ryan of Wisconsin and Sen. John McCain of Arizona in their GOP primaries. Yet thus far, McCain, Ryan and other Republicans who've reluctantly declared that they plan to back Trump for president appear to be sticking with him.

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Paul Ryan and Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz are about to test voters' anti-establishment mood, first hand. In an election year that's seen both parties' supporters seethe against Washington from Florida to Arizona still have House primaries.

FAA ignored internal safety recommendations on balloon tours

WASHINGTON (AP) — An internal Federal Aviation Administration report more than three years ago urged greater oversight of the hot air balloon tour industry, but agency officials ignored the warning and later rejected similar recommendations from a federal accident investigations board.
