#78 - on Director Phil's list of things to do in state parks - Paddle Aiken State Park's kayak trail on the Edisto River. www.southcarolinaparks.com/aiken

Kristalyn Poole Does this still stand?

Scott Shrader I was thinking the same thing. Been wanting to do this, but everytime I check you cant.

Amanda Weng I went to the walking trail there, and it's in terrible disrepair - very unsafe. The boardwalks over the swampy areas are broken, and I'm sure there are nails and bacteria down in that water. The park has lost funding and they are not able to maintain it.

Ivey Nicole Savage been checking for weeks. We went the beginning of May just for that and it was closed. Was told it would be open in 4-6 weeks. Would love to know they just have not updated the website.

South Carolina State Parks Hi all! We have not been told by the park to update the website. We are checking with the park at this time to see if this still stands. I will post an update here, and update the website, as soon as we hear from the park. Thanks!

South Carolina State Parks I just spoke with the park manager. Unfortunately, it is still being worked on and is still closed at this time. However, there is a public boat ramp on State Park Rd. approximately 1 quarter mile out of the park entrance that folks, using their own privately owned kayaks or canoes, may access the river with. It is about half way down the canoe trail, so some folks opt to paddle upstream for a bit, and then float back down. We are not putting rental canoes in at that location, but we are still offering canoe rentals on Cabin Lake and Fish Lake. Hope this helps. We will update the website, as soon as the canoe launch is open!
