Subject: RE: Info on natural disaster recovery

Good Morning Ms. Stewart,

Thank you for reaching out to us. We work with the South Carolina Emergency Management Division (SCEMD) to provide a consistent message to the South Carolina citizens regarding emergency situations in our state. At this time we are limiting the information we provide to information from SCEMD and FEMA, or prepared by our office in conjunction with one of those agencies.

Thank you again and have a great day.

*Best Regards,

Hi there,

I noticed you're sharing a few resources on <http://ltgov.sc.gov/emergency-preparedness/pages/default.aspx>. Are you open to adding one more?

I'm leading a project to help college students who attend school in a natural disaster area. My part of the project is to share great web resources on natural disaster preparedness and recovery. I recently found a fantastic guidebook that walks students through important do's and don'ts in the wake of a tornado, earthquake, or similar catastrophic event. The guide also describes how college students can help their campus or community after an event, and even how a natural disaster can affect the college application process. You can check out the entire guide below.

Recovering from a natural disaster in college: <https://www.affordablecollegesonline.org/college-resource-center/natural-disasters/>

I'm really excited about this project and would love to share this new guide with your readers. I look forward to hearing from you.

Best,

Caitlin Stewart
