

Symposium on Conservation Easements

Landowners, real estate developers, environmentalists, and concerned citizens are invited to attend the symposium, "Conservation Easements—The Voluntary Protection of Land," on November 14, 2000, at the Palmetto Expo Center in Greenville, SC. The all day conference, sponsored by Upstate Forever and the Foothills Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Council, will be devoted entirely to explaining, discussing, and analyzing conservation easements. The registration fee is $20 on or before November 3, 2000, and $25 for late registration. This fee includes lunch.

Conservation easements are one of the most popular and widely used means of protecting natural, scenic, agricultural, and historic lands in the United States. It involves a voluntary agreement by the landowner to give up some or all of the rights to develop property, for which the owner can realize significant income, estate, and property tax benefits.

Experts in the field will explain the standard provisions in easements, their tax benefits and how they are appraised, and property owners who have conservation easements will also be available to answer questions. This is the first in-depth conference on conservation easements that has ever been held in the Upstate.

To register or for more information, contact Upstate Forever at (864) 250-0500. Or visit <http://www.ga.nrcs.usda.gov/sc/home.htm> and click on the ‘conservation easement seminar’ link at the bottom of the page for a downloadable registration form.

Art & Agriculture Calendars Available

For the 4th and final year, artists around the state have joined forces with the South Carolina Department of Agriculture to build the Art and Agriculture Watercolor Collection. Thanks to their efforts, we now have 49 paintings depicting South Carolina agriculture in the collection. Housed in the Department's Conference Center at the entrance of the Columbia State Farmers Market, the collection has shown what two distinctly different entities can do together to further agricultural education and public awareness of the arts and agriculture in the state.

Artists for the Art and Agriculture Watercolor Calendar 2001 include: Kathy Caudill - Rock Hill, Marsha Dargan - Darlington, Philip Morris - Orangeburg, Barbara St. Denis - Easley, Barbara Yon - Ridge Spring, and Donna Gore, Jackie Brantley, May Reisz, Margerie Ross, Tom Thompson, Betsy Thorne, and Juanita Yancey - all of Columbia. Because of the contributions of these and all of the other artists involved in the Art and Agriculture Watercolor project through the years, farm and city people are learning that they really depend on each other.

Sponsors of the project this year include the SC Agriculture Educators' Association, SC Cattlemen's Association, SC FFA, W. Lee Flowers-IGA, and the SC Beef Board. A portion of the proceeds from the sale of all the calendars will be retained by the participating FFA chapters to further their local educational programs. The cooperative effort increases awareness of agriculture in the state, and, at the same time, supports high school and college students preparing for careers in the science, business, or technology of agriculture and related areas.

The calendars sell for $10 each. The SC Agriculture Educators Association and the SC Cattlemen's Association are out selling the calendars along with the over 5,000 SC FFA members. The calendars make great gifts for family and friends and great promotional items for businesses.

The Art and Agriculture Watercolor Collection calendars 2001 are not only works of art, but because this coming new year marks the turn-of-the-millennium, they will be valuable collector's items. So, whether you're a farmer or non-farmer, be sure to contact your FFA Chapter or agriculture teacher at your local school or one of the over 2,000 cattle men and women across the state to order your SC Art and Agriculture Watercolor Collection Calendars while supplies lasts!

For more information, call Jim Scott, SC FFA, 803-788-5700, Ext. 33, for your nearest high school or college FFA Chapter, or Brian Bolt, SC Cattlemen's Association, 864-459-0813.

Or, send a check for $10 for each calendar that you wish to order payable to the Friends of Agriculture to: Friends of Agriculture, % SC Department of Agriculture, PO, Box 11280, Columbia, SC 29211.

SC Cattlemen’s Association Celebrates 50 Years

An electric power plant will be constructed on the Savannah River above Augusta. Kudzu is being used for grazing livestock and for land erosion. Flue-cured tobacco is grown in 31 counties in the state. There are 427,000 cows and calves, 165,000 milk cows, and 612,000 hogs in South Carolina. The Columbia State Farmers Market on Bluff Road in Columbia will be opening soon. John Trask & Sons of Beaufort are installing the first farm radio system in their trucks and cars. Gramling Peach Shed near Spartanburg is trying an experimental little machine which defuzzes peaches. And, the SC Cattlemen’s Association is being organized. That was in 1950!

Times have changed. Producers and farmers are still looking for new ways to improve their operations. And, for 50 years, the South Carolina Cattlemen’s Association has been working to assist producers---producers who care about keeping the family farm and a stable economy, protecting the environment, providing a safe food supply, and about the welfare of their animals. And, we all should care that they are doing their best for us.

Times are good for most people in this nation. It’s during times like these when things are good and we have enough of everything that we often neglect to think of the possibility that our children or our children’s children may not have enough of anything, if farmers stop farming.

This year on November 2-3, the South Carolina Cattlemen’s Association will celebrate their 50th anniversary at their Annual Conference and Trade Show in Greenville at Embassy Suites. The agenda for the conference includes several industry speakers as well as Congressman Jim DeMint of Greenville and me. I am deeply honored to be invited to take part in their event.

In addition to speakers, the association, under the guidance of their new executive director, Brian Bolt, has planned a series of educational sessions on Thursday, November 2nd in the Cattlemen’s College sponsored by Pfizer Animal Health. The program on Friday will highlight several industry-related topics as well as a banquet that evening focusing on the history of the association.

The South Carolina Cattlemen’s Association is owned, controlled, managed, and funded by and for producers of all breeds of cattle. There are over 25 county or multi-county local associations functioning around the state, and the SCCA is, in turn, a charter affiliate member of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

The association of over 2,200 cattle men and women unites producers to advance the economic, political, and social interests of the state’s cattle industry. Workshops, seminars, and meetings, like the one to be held in Greenville, are designed to help cattlemen stay abreast of new technology, production techniques, risk management, and other areas related to cattle.

The South Carolina Cattlemen’s Association is also helping to ensure agriculture’s future by supporting the South Carolina FFA through the sale of the 2001 Art and Agriculture Watercolor Collection calendars. The front cover of the calendar depicts Neil Boyd’s Charolais cows in a pasture in Clover, SC. Another is of Angus cows, painted by Barbara Yon of Ridge Spring who has a vested interest in the cattle business. Her son, Kevin, and his wife, Lydia “McGill” Yon, are cattle producers from long-time cattle farm families. You could almost call the 2001 calendar a real “cow-lender.”

Times have changed, indeed! We now have nuclear-powered as well as hydro-electric plants. Kudzu is an unwanted weed. Livestock numbers are down from the 50s, while quality is up. Farm radios have been replaced by cell phones. But, one thing hasn’t changed---the care and concern that our producers give to their cattle and calves. In fact, the SC Cattlemen’s Association is working harder than ever to help their members produce the best quality products possible for you and your family.

If you are a cattle producer or are involved in a cattle-related business or if you simply want to learn more about the cattle and calf industry in South Carolina, I encourage you to call Brian Bolt at 877-859-9121 and sign up for the upcoming conference.

Congratulations, South Carolina Cattlemen’s Association, on your 50th Anniversary!

Les Tindal

What’s Up!

Local ordinances and state legislation affect everyone. To keep you informed, we will occasionally post information in "What's Up!" that you may want to investigate further.

“County zoning officials in various counties have enacted, or are in the process of enacting, zoning ordinances that some landowners say will adversely affect the value of their property. All landowners of agricultural property or any other type of property should be sure to keep up to date on the activities of the zoning commissions in their counties.”
