An Interview with a Team of Innovators

This summer, ACL was named a winner in the HHS Innovates awards for its efforts to link health care and community services. The awards recognize creative solutions developed by HHS employees in response to some of the nation's most challenging problems in health, health care and government.

Marisa Scala-Foley, ACL's team lead for business acumen and health IT, leads the program that earned this year's honors. In today's post, she answers a few questions about the program, what it has accomplished, and what makes it a great example of innovation.
