Emergency Readiness for Older Adults and People with Disabilities

By Kathy Greenlee, Assistant Secretary for Aging and Administrator of ACL

In recent years, the United States has experienced a number of significant natural disasters. Several of these events happened with little or no warning. One key lesson that we have learned from these unfortunate circumstances is to “be prepared,” a message that is especially important for older Americans and people with disabilities. September is officially designated National Preparedness Month, but preparedness is something we should be thinking about all year long. Click here to read more.
