scstateparks We knowww, baby fawns are sooo cute! 😊 We've received a lot of questions about what to do if you see a baby fawn in the park. Well, if you happen to come across a fawn, (after you quickly obsess over its cuteness) our rangers suggest you leave it be. Even if you can't see her, the mother is usually not far away. Many think the fawn is abandoned, when in fact, it's very normal for the mother to leave the fawn during the day in order to avoid leading predators to its location! 🐾: @afreshnoggin 📍 Poinsett State Park at 13:00:27 on 7/08/2020 UTC pound2princess_parker Fawns know by innate instinct to curl up and stay hidden. Even for hours. If you come across one leave it be. The exception would be if its ears are curled at the ends. That shows dehydration and it may need intervention klcox17 @fuzzyfawnwildlife is an amazing deer rescuer in NY state. Her site is so educational and full of cuteness overload. Not all the stories end well, but she has an incredible heart for these deer.
