Finally, two governors who did the right thing! Now it's up to governors of the other 48 states to do what Obama refuses to do - protect citizens of the US from those who would import a deadly disease.

When even a doctor can't be trusted to do the right thing voluntarily, someone in government with some common sense needs to be sure they are quarantined whether they like it or not.

I'm old enough to remember when people with TB were quarantined. My mother remembered when people with typhoid and other contagious diseases were quarantined. Have we lost all respect for life to the point where anyone is free to infect others because they can't be bothered to care enough to stop spreading death?
