What I was wondering is if FEMA could cover these costs if it is categorized as stabilization and emergency?

This may be a terrible idea, but I am going to pose it anyway:

With regard to the dam issues (i.e. debris clogging spillways in dams posing a threat to re-breaching and re-flooding and/or private homeowners not taking action to clear debris and/or make repairs to dams posing a threat to life and property): Could the Governor use her authority to "take over" the vulnerable high-hazard dams in some form to make life-safety or property repairs?
