Uber launches data program revealing traffic flows. Long Beach unveils map-centric data portal.

Not rendering correctly? View this email as a web page here.

Tuesday, Jan. 10, 2017
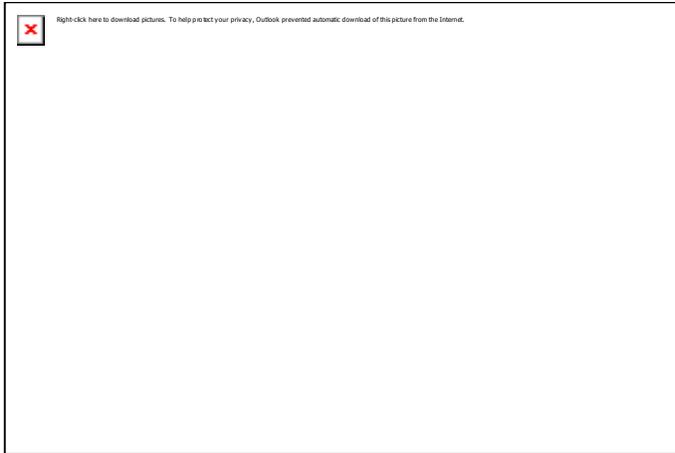

Ohio dips toe into procurement overhaul with vendor pre-qual

Machine learning is in the budget in Ohio, but only after the state's technology chief told departments for more than a year that they had to wait. He had a plan.

GET THE FULL SCOOP >>
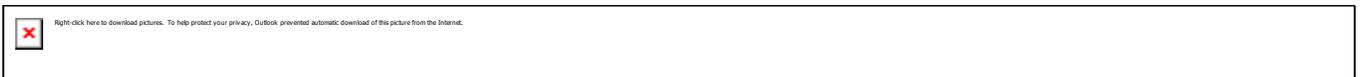

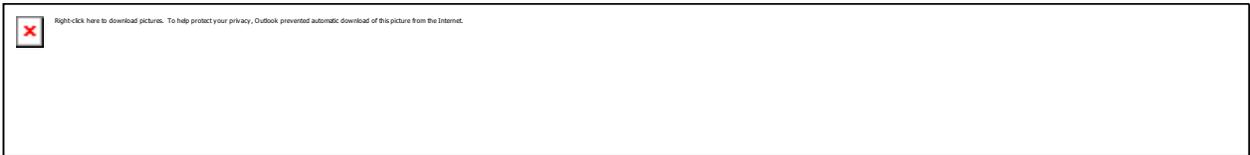

Uber launches open data platform revealing city traffic flows

The ride-hailing company is offering data from its more than 2 billion rides per year on a new website intended to assist city planners.
Read More >>

Long Beach unveils map-centric open data portal

A new city website pairs data with maps to make exploring and playing with city information an activity accessible to residents of all technological skill levels.
Read More >>

Washington, D.C., transit cybersecurity comes under Senate scrutiny

After San Francisco transit was temporarily crippled by a ransomware attack in late 2016, Sen. Mark Warner is worried that Washington, D.C.'s transit might be vulnerable.
Read More >>

Effort to codify Presidential Innovation Fellows program is back in House

House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy has reintroduced a bill that would make sure the Obama program — which has affected countless state and local policies — sticks around.
Read More >>

Chicago's open records lawsuits totaled more than $670,000 in 2016

An inordinate volume and volatility of unfulfilled open information requests in a single year underscores the role of federal leadership, specifically law enforcement transparency policies started by President Barack Obama.
Read More >>

Right-click here to download pictures. To help protect your privacy, Outlook prevented automatic download of this picture from the Internet.

StateScoop is a State & Local government IT media company, a one stop news source and the government IT community's platform for education and collaboration