Melissa Alexander Lippincott awesome! i wish i could see it in person!

Joyce McCarrell And it is my understanding that there were large numbers of nests at nearby beaches, too. I wish those little hatchlings had been hatching LAST week when I was at Edisto!

Ann Birdie Hammond Hubby and I saw a couple of nests hatch a few years ago at Hunting Island. The most awesome site! I cried.

Karla Waters McRae I agree with Melissa and Ann K.-this is something I would LOVE to see in person!! Maybe one day I'll be lucky enough to witness such an event..

Penny Morgan Ginn It is incredible to witness. Edisto (at least back in July and August) does nest inventories a couple times a week; they typically find a few hatched turtles "stuck" down in the nest and release them.

Janet Mathis Arnold I want to see this in person one day ... I love turtles ...

Laura Di Girolamo Simoes I witnessed this last year down near Georgetown, SC. It was the most beautifully, stunning, amazing event I've ever seen. I think it's unusual for them to hatch and go for the ocean during the day. When we saw this last year, we were allowed no flashlights, flashbulbs, etc. They follow the moon's light toward the ocean.

Laura Nicolai Kent I remember seeing the hatchlings years ago on Pritchard's Island..I named a few hatchlings...Augustus and Julious...

Dacy Pollock They are so sweet, so vulnerable. Where are they? Do they make nests along myrtle beach area? I've never seen any taped off around here. Good luck, little things!
