NASUAD Congratulates Seema Verma on Confirmation as Administrator of CMS

On March 15th, Martha Roherty, on behalf of National Association of States United for Aging and Disabilities (NASUAD), wrote to congratulate Seema Verma on her confirmation as Administrator of the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS).

Ms. Roherty writes, "We look forward to working with you in your new role. We are excited to work in partnership with a CMS Administrator that possesses such a strong background in the Medicaid program, including experience with LTSS-related issues in several states. We believe that there are opportunities for strengthening the partnerships between states and the federal government as we seek to improve supports and services for older adults, people with disabilities, and other individuals who require LTSS."

income and poverty, living arrangements, education, health, and caregiving. Principal sources of data for the Profile are the U.S. Census Bureau, the National Center for Health Statistics, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The Profile incorporates the latest data available. Some of the highlights from the Profile include:

- From 2005 to 2015, the population of adults over the age of 65 in the U.S. increased from over 36 million in 2005, to close to 48 million in 2015 - a 30 percent increase;
- Approximately 15 percent of the U.S. population is now an older American;
- Roughly 29 percent of noninstitutionalized older adults live alone, including almost half of women age 75 and older;
- Social Security provided 90 percent or more of the income received by 33 percent of beneficiaries in 2014; and
- Over 4.2 million older Americans, or 8.8 percent, were below the poverty level in 2015.

Integrating Behavioral Health into Long-Term Care Rebalancing

In January 2017 the National Coalition on Mental Health & Aging (NCMHA) released a report on integrating older adult behavioral health into long-term care rebalancing. The report includes opportunities and recommendations for funders such as public health agencies and managed care organizations (MCOs). The report notes that close to 50 percent of individuals receiving long-term care have a mental disorder other than dementia.

Centers for Independent Living Annual Program Performance Report Open for Public Comment

On March 10, 2017, ACL released for public comment proposed revisions for the Centers for Independent Living Annual Program Performance Report (CILPPR). The notice for the Proposed Revisions is now on display in the Federal Register. ACL notes that the final CILPPR will not take effect until all comments have been reviewed and a final information intake tool is released. Comments are due by May 5, 2017.

Issue Brief: Opportunities to Improve Nutrition for Older Adults and Reduce Risk of Poor Health Outcomes

On March 15, 2017, ACL released a new issue brief that discusses new opportunities to enhance nutrition and health for older adults. As people age they may experience malnutrition due to a variety of factors - changes in appetite, medications, and limited ability to shop for, and prepare, foods, among others.

Malnutrition may lead to poorer health for older individuals as well.

However, states, service providers, and health plans can access evidence - such as this brief - to help improve older adults' nutritional welfare and health status. Examples from this brief could be useful for state and local officials from State Units on Aging, Medicaid programs, and health care organizations that serve older Americans.

FY 2015 Report to Congress: Older Americans Act

AoA/ACL recently released its FY 2015 annual report to Congress on the Older Americans Act (OAA). In FY 2015, AoA and the Aging Network provided direct services to nearly 11 million Americans 60 and over - or one out of every six older adults - including three million clients who received intensive in-home services and supports. Additionally, over 700,000 caregivers received supports such as respite and access to a peer support network.

CMS Releases Letter to States on Section 1332 Innovation Waivers

On March 13, 2017, CMS sent a letter to states on Section 1332 of the Affordable Care Act (ACA). Section 1332 State Innovation Waivers give states increased flexibility to provide services under their state Medicaid programs as long as the waiver will provide coverage that is at least as comprehensive and affordable as before the waiver, and also does not increase the federal deficit.

CMS encourages states that are interested in pursuing a Section 1332 Waiver to reach out to the relevant Departments soon in order to gain assistance in developing their waivers.

CMS Announces New Educational Initiative to Raise Awareness of Chronic Care Management

On March 15, 2017, the CMS Office of Minority Health (CMS

OMH) and the Federal Office of Rural Health Policy at the Health Resources and Service Administration (HRSA) announced a new educational initiative call Connected Care, which aims to raise awareness of the benefits of chronic care management (CCM) services for Medicare beneficiaries with multiple chronic conditions. Connected Care is a part of a nationwide effort to better serve Medicare beneficiaries under fee-for-service with a particular focus on racial and ethnic minorities and rural populations, which generally have higher incidence of chronic diseases. Some of the resources from Connected Care are:

- A toolkit for health care professionals;
- A toolkit for partners; and
- Patient education resources.

CMS Releases RTI Evaluation of Initiative to Reduce Avoidable Hospitalizations among Nursing Facility Residents

On March 7, 2017, CMS released a new evaluative report from RTI on the Initiative to Reduce Avoidable Hospitalizations among Nursing Facility Residents, which indicated some promising results. For the second consecutive year, all seven long-term care (LTC) facility partners taking part in the initiative indicated a decline in all-cause hospitalizations as well as potentially avoidable hospitalizations, when compared to a comparison group.

Additionally, MDS-based quality measures did not show any pattern of change in regard to the Initiative, which suggests that the lower hospitalization rates are not generally leading to a decrease in quality of care for individuals residing in a LTC facility.

Congressional Budget Office

CBO Releases Score of the American Health Care Act

The Congressional Budget Office has released its official score of the American Health Care Act, which is the legislation that would repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act. As a reminder, a CBO score is the official estimate of impacts of a piece of legislation under consideration in congress. These are the numbers that will be used when discussing the effects of this legislation for purposes of budgeting, the number of people covered, etc. The most basic summary is that the bill is expected to save the federal government money while increasing the number of uninsured individuals in the country.

In summary: The bill is expected to reduce government revenues by $900 billion over the 10 year period from 2017-2026, primarily due to repealing the majority of the ACA taxes. Despite the reduced revenues, the legislation would save the Federal government $300 billion since it reduces spending on health care and Medicaid by a total of $1.2 trillion over that period. The bulk of these savings comes from reducing Medicaid expenditures.

CBO estimates that the bill will reduce total Medicaid spending by 1/4 of the projected amount in 2026, for a total reduction of $880 billion in Federal spending. This amount would presumably be increased by states reducing their share of spending on the program in response to the limit in Federal spending. CBO's projections estimate that 14 million fewer individuals would be served by Medicaid under this legislation, and there would be 24 million more uninsured people overall by 2026.

Substantial savings would also come from the repeal of the ACA subsidies (the advance premium tax credits) and the implementation of less generous refundable tax credits in the AHCA. The repeal of ACA credits would save $673 billion, which would be offset by $361 billion for new tax credits - resulting in a total saving of $312 billion over the ten-year period. The legislation is also expected to increase insurance premiums in the short term due to healthier people exiting the market, but decrease them in the long-run because of the reduced mandates regarding covered benefits and actuarial equivalency in the marketplace. CBO specifically notes that the premiums will decrease substantially for younger people, but will likely increase for individuals in their 50s and 60s due to insurers being able to charge older adults more under this bill than the ACA allowed

MACPAC Issues March 2017 Report to Congress

On March 15, 2017, MACPAC released its March 2017 report to Congress, which included a new analysis of 2014 data that indicates declines in hospital uncompensated care but also continued financial stress for safety-net providers. Specifically, aggregate hospital uncompensated care decreased by $4.6 billion between 2013 and 2014, with the most significant declines found in states that expanded Medicaid.

As a part of the report MACPAC provides nine recommendations to Congress, which includes a recommendation to extend the CHIP program for another five years through fiscal year 2022.

Medicaid: Essential for Individuals Needing Long-Term Services and Supports

AARP Public Policy Institute has published a new report on Medicaid's essential role in providing LTSS for many Americans, especially older adults. Although most U.S. seniors will not rely on Medicaid, an estimated one out of every five will need the program to assist with paying for LTSS at some point in their lives. This will become all the more important as most Americans do not have private long-term care insurance, family caregivers become strained, and percentage of older adults in the population in the U.S. continues to increase.
