Governor Haley,

I would like to know why South Carolina does not institute the same laws that have been passed in Missouri to curtail illegal immigration. In 2007, Missouri passed a state law designating that English is the official language. Since 2008, State Highway Patrol officers are required to check the immigration status of anyone pulled over for a traffic violation. Lastly, in Missouri illegal immigrants are ineligible for state sponsored health care programs, food stamps, and financial aid programs. Due to these changes Missouri has some of the lowest illegal immigrants compared to other states. Shouldn't the same laws be passed in South Carolina to curtail the movement of illegal immigrants to our great state?

I would like your opinion on this matter.

Sincerely,
