Got it. Thanks. Two questions:

1. Why does the governor want agencies to identify budget reductions when there is growth - even if it is less growth than last year.
2. In the event of a downturn, would all agencies be treated equally with the 3 percent or would some agencies - such as Education, which Supreme Court said must do more for rural schools or Social Services, which is trying to get back on its feet not be expected to reduce as much?
