Kathy Krepcio, Executive Director of the Heldrich Center for Workforce Development at Rutgers University, will engage participants in Southern Growth's 2013 conference around provocative questions prompted by her 2012 report: The State of the U.S. Workforce System: Time for Incremental Alignment or Serious Reform?

Among other highlights of the one day conference focused on key workforce development issues will be the release of the 2013 Report on the Future of the South: Re-imagining Workforce Development and a panel of state workforce development leaders discussing important trends and issues, facilitated by Southern Growth's Executive Director, Ted Abernathy and hosted by Thomas Zawacki, Secretary of the Kentucky Education and Workforce Development Cabinet.

Additional featured speakers at the event will include Jeff Selingo, editor at large of The Chronicle of Higher Education, a senior fellow at Education Sector, and author of College (Un)bound, Tom Volta, Vice President of Human Resources for UPS Air Group, Doug Henton, CEO of Collaborative Economics and lead author of the April 2013 report The Cornerstones of Economic Security for Resilient Workers, and Jean Johnson, Senior Fellow at Public Agenda.

The conference is being held in conjunction with the Southern Governors' Association's (SGA) annual meeting, which will take place September 7-9 and focus on the theme of Advancing Manufacturing in the American South. You can register for one or both events on the SGA website, at <http://www.southerngovernors.org/Default.aspx?alias=www.southerngovernors.org/amregistration>.

Registration for the Southern Growth event is only $150!
