

THE CLINTONS' WAR ON WOMEN
Roger Stone and Robert Morrow
Skyhorse Publishing, 2015

This book does more than any other to shed light on the unethical and illegal behaviors of the Clintons and Bushes.

"The Bush-Clinton alliance proves that the right-left divide is merely a distraction by the power elite who run America and have no ideology at all, other than the ideology of money and power. The Republican and Democrat parties have sadly morphed into one large Wall Street-financed political establishment in which no matter which party gets elected, the erosion of our civil liberties continues and we pile up more debt, levy higher taxes on working people, and engage in endless foreign wars where America's interest are sometimes vague. The close alliance of the Bushes and Clintons shows that party is meaningless in today's political system." Page 23

In another quote, the defects found in Bill and Hillary are plain to see.

"A recent article revealed that the odd missteps by the notorious slick discourser are the result of dementia. 'The truth is that Bill has lost it,' a longtime Clinton family friend told the Globe. There are days when he believes he's still president and gives his aides orders to place calls to leaders around the world--then he forgets doing it. Other days he can't remember ever being president! He frequently asks his driver to take him home to the White House, but Hillary has issued explicit orders to ignore him and just take him to their house in Chappaqua. On his last visit to his presidential library in Little Rock where he has a luxury apartment, he couldn't remember that he was once the governor of Arkansas. It's all very sad."

The magazine also exposed one of Hillary's dark secrets in another recent edition: her thirst for the bottle. 'Hillary's drinking got totally out of control,' said one of Hillary's friends, who the presidential hopeful turned to for help.' The stress of her high-pressure political career, never-ending scandals and her worsening health have sent her into life-threatening booze hell. She turned to drink to drown her fears. Hillary tries to hide her problem like she lies about so many things. But she has repeatedly suffered blackouts. When she comes around, she has no idea where she has been or what she has said or done. She's not fit to be president." Page 379
