Unfortunately, the President's budget fails to fulfill commitments made by the Federal Government to the people of South Carolina; commitments that ensure that nuclear materials are processed safely and sent to a permanent home.

While South Carolina is a proud nuclear state, this administration has chosen to treat us more like a dumping ground than a partner in the important tasks of nuclear non-proliferation, advancing proven energy technologies, and finishing environmental remediation of Cold War-era wastes. The Federal Government has promised to move weapons-grade materials out of this state and Governor Haley expects that to happen under current timelines. The best way to do that is by finishing MOX.

Thoughts?

Suggested response? Want to be able to run your suggestions by the governor ASAP.

Subject: Budget request - MOX

Hey –
I'm writing about the administration's budget request, which includes asking for $200M less for the MOX project compared to last year's funding. I'm writing now and have reached out to the appropriate DC delegation members, but I wanted to also make sure I reached out to see if the governor had any comment. For all intents and purposes, the Obama administration is drawing down funding on MOX and says the project may no longer be affordable. Thanks – am trying to have this story wrapped up by 2 p.m.
Meg
