scstateparks "As a park ranger, the best compliment that I could ever get is that I helped someone see and appreciate nature. For someone to stand in awe at a sunrise and appreciate all it brings, from the beginning of a new day to the opening of new bloom, is truly amazing." - SC State Parks Director Paul McCormack - Most of us grew to love the outdoors because of the experiences we made with our friends, family or even park rangers. Who or what sparked your love for the outdoors? ❤️ To read more of Director Paul's words from this month's eParks Newsletter, head to the link in our bio. - 📍 Sadlers Creek State Park 📷: @douglashurdle mary.poole I was introduced to the idea of hiking back in junior high when I was invited to go one time. After that, my dog encouraged me to get out more to socialize her after she had started developing a fear of people. 3 years later, she's the most confident I've ever seen her and I give full credit to hiking ❤️ acorn365 My dad and mom started me off and then all the wonderful campers and counselors summer after summer at my summer camp pushed it to the max! 😊 janice.hess.735 Growing up in the 60/70's era, outside was mandatory. Didn't mind, more to do and more fun outside. 🌲 robinbarattaartist Dad was a scout master, Mom was Brown Owl. They took me camping with the scouts Victoria Day weekend, when I was mere days old, and every chance we got thereafter. Over 6 decades, and I've never stopped. Now my mission in life is to record disappearing landscapes. That early learnt reverence for the natural world is my loadstar.
