

From: Craft, Mary-Kathryn <MKCraft@dew.sc.gov>

To: Craft, Mary-KathrynMKCraft@dew.sc.gov

Date: 12/18/2014 12:24:07 PM

Subject: News release: Record-Breaking Number of S. C. Counties Certified as Work Ready

Attachments: NR\_Work ReadyDeccounties\_121814\_Formatted.pdf

---

Good Afternoon,

Please see the following news release below and attached.

--

For Immediate Release

December 18, 2014

Record-Breaking Number of S. C. Counties Certified as Work Ready

COLUMBIA—Lt. Gov. Yancey McGill and Lt. Gov.-Elect Henry McMaster announced today that nearly half of South Carolina's counties are now certified as work ready, outpacing the nation in an initiative that showcases the highly skilled workforce that businesses require in a competitive economy.

Eighteen counties were recognized for achieving certification through the South Carolina Work Ready Communities (SCWRC) initiative. The counties are: Abbeville, Allendale, Anderson, Bamberg, Beaufort, Berkeley, Cherokee, Dorchester, Edgefield, Fairfield, Florence, Greenwood, Laurens, Marlboro, Newberry, Pickens, Sumter and Williamsburg.

“Such momentum demonstrates how dedicated these local communities are to attracting businesses,” Lt. Gov. McGill said. “I want to congratulate all our new certified work ready counties and encourage others to keep working towards their certification goals.”

The 18 newly certified counties have all met specified workforce and education goals, demonstrating to businesses a strong workforce and commitment to economic growth. The Palmetto State now has 22 counties with this designation, which is more than any other state in the nation.

“With almost half of our counties now certified, we are well on our way to becoming the first certified work ready state in the nation,” Lt. Gov.-Elect McMaster said. “The next four years will be critical, focusing on economic development and these initiatives will help bring prosperity and growth to our state. This will show the rest of the country and world that South Carolina is ready and open for business."

SCWRC provides a framework to strengthen economic development using a community-based approach grounded in certifying counties as work ready. To become a South Carolina Work Ready Community, each county has to reach or exceed goals in the following categories: National Career Readiness Certificates (WorkKeys® testing), graduation rates, soft-skills and business support.

"Counties of all sizes are catching on to the effectiveness of the Work Ready program and realizing that certification allows each area to market itself to new and existing businesses and ultimately results in more jobs for South Carolinians," said Cheryl M. Stanton, executive director of the SC Department of Employment and Workforce.

The latest work ready counties join the ranks of Clarendon, McCormick, Colleton and Saluda, which previously received the South Carolina Work Ready Community designation.

South Carolina was one of four pilot states selected to participate in the ACT Certified Work Ready Community program. For additional information, visit www.scworkready.org.

###

Mary-Kathryn Craft

Office of Public Information

South Carolina Department of Employment and Workforce

1550 Gadsden St., Columbia, SC 29201

803.737.2013

Web: dew.sc.gov | Twitter: @scdewinfo | Blog: Palmetto Workforce Connections

CONFIDENTIALITY: This email and any files transmitted with it contain information from the South Carolina Department of Employment and Workforce which may be confidential or privileged. The information is intended for business purposes only, and is to be used by the named recipients. If you are not the intended recipient, please be aware that any disclosure, copying, distribution or use of the contents of this message is prohibited. Please notify the sender immediately if you have received this email by mistake and delete this email from your system. Please note that any views or opinions presented in this email are solely those of the author and do not necessarily represent those of the South Carolina Department of Employment and Workforce.