Subject: Tennis this Saturday

When I was 13 in the summer of '61, Duke Lafaye and I won the city's 15-and-under doubles championship on the Forest Lake red clay courts. We thought we were hot although we weren't all that dedicated, just occasional club players more interested in the population by the pool than we were in the growing competition at the courts. Basketball player Rhett Wolfe chose tennis that summer as his off-season sport, and the next summer he wiped us polite part-time types off the courts. This Saturday the club is host for the Rhett Wolfe Memorial one-day tournament. Your fifty bucks entry fee goes to one of Rhett's favorite charities. The level of play shouldn't be all that intimidating. George Crouch and I have registered for the 3.0 doubles. To register call the pro shop at the club. Come pay and come play and remember Rhett. And even if you don't plan to play, drop by anyway to watch the matches and to contribute to the cause.
