WEBINAR TOMORROW

Finding Their Way Home: The Importance of Aging in Place for Older Adults

This web seminar will help professionals in aging better understand why older adults want to age in place, and the difficulties older adults and their families face in making this a reality. This event is part of the ASA Member Series and is based on a workshop that was presented at the 2015 Aging in America Conference. This event is free to you as an ASA member and includes complimentary CEUs.

Is Sleep a Modifiable Risk Factor for Alzheimer's Disease?

We spend a third of our lives asleep, yet many of us don't give sleep much thought until it goes wrong. If one bad night can have us longing for sleep for the whole next day, what might decades of poor sleep do to our health? And is there anything we can do about it?

The Hunger-Obesity Paradox in Older Americans

Given that older adults sacrificed so much to establish and protect life in America as we know it, why do we allow millions of them to face the threat of hunger?

New Online Certificate Courses Open for Enrollment!

We are excited to announce that a brand-new online course is now open for enrollment! During the five-week Health and Wellness in an Aging Society, expert USC faculty members will explore common health issues faced by seniors, public health in an aging world, and the strategies for caring for older adults with various health challenges. Enroll now.

We are also pleased to announce the return of our popular Fundamentals of Gerontology course! Enroll now in one or both courses, offered exclusively to ASA members in partnership with USC Leonard Davis School of Gerontology. Courses begin October 19, and enrollees receive a certificate of completion after successfully completing each course. Three course options are also available for 2016.
