Joann, We've made some revisions as outlined below, including a quote from the Governor. Other than the revisions below, we are ok with it. Thanks, Holly

COLUMBIA, S.C. - The One SC Fund, a fundraising effort that helps South Carolinians who are recovering from unprecedented flooding continue the re-building process, today announced additional grants for non-profits across the state.

Governor Nikki Haley – with the help of Central Carolina Community Foundation and a team of South Carolinians from entertainment, business and public service - announced the One SC Fund in December after flooding touched South Carolinians from every walk of life.

Nonprofits are set to receive $760,000 in Phase II grants and will provide volunteer labor and an additional $4.2 million in financial support for these projects that range from mold to complete home rebuilding.

“We have neighbors and families who are still in need as we continue to re-build a stronger South Carolina, and we are grateful for the continued generosity and kindness of so many across the state and country,” said Gov. Nikki Haley.

The grant recipients were selected by a grants committee made up of representatives from four Community Foundations representing the 24 FEMA designated emergency counties, and business and civic leaders. These individuals know their communities well and helped distribute the funds to areas where the dollars will have the greatest impact.

“The One SC Fund has helped bridge the funding gap in order to rebuild our state,” said JoAnn Turnquist, President and CEO of Central Carolina Community Foundation. “We are grateful for the many generous donations made to the fund that allow these organizations to help hundreds of families and individuals resume their lives.”
