

To Governor Haley.

Alabama's attorney general has told all the judges they don't have to obey federal law because Alabama has states rights. -The law that allows gay marriages. Bill of Rights, amendment 10: - Powers of the States and People.

The powers not delegated (put into care of) (not given) to the United States by the Constitution (So there are powers not mentioned by the constitution), nor prohibited by it to the States (powers for states outlawed by the Constitution), are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

So the states can make up powers for themselves, as long as it is not specifically against the principles and laws of the Constitution. There is liberty, the right to do anything non-injurious to others. Which would seem as though gays have a right to marry, do what they want. But there are many children waiting to be born into the United States, waiting for their father on Earth to marry a woman. The order that helped make the planet told me that publicity should not be given gays, because it causes some men to decide to be gay. Then their children do not get to be born and live here. So it causes the country to have less scientists, teachers, soldiers, etc. So it harms the country. And it harms thousands of children and future adults who planned to live on Earth that wanted to be born, and wait to be born in the next world of lighter density: bodies and matter. They wont get to do their planned jobs or meet their freinds they planned to meet, or buy the things they wanted.

So allowing laws about gays gives publicity, which causes a problem, which harms the country, which diminishes the number of solders in the country. This harms our defense, which could then be considered treasonous, or subverting our good country. It harms adults who will not get born, so it is bad. Bad is when there is hurt done to others. It will then make a bad state and eventually a bad country.

Thus, please tell judges in South Carolina, the power you can make, to not have publicity about gayness by ignoring Federal laws for it. Then less men will decide to be gay, and then have the children that are waiting to be born in the next world of lighter density matter (less atoms per cubic inch of "rock").

I am a religion-founder-medium that has had help hearing the next world, and I have seen it too.
