"The Roman Catholic Diocese of Charleston will release the names of [ Roman Catholic ] priests in South Carolina credibly accused of sexual abuse of minors dating back to 1950, the [ Roman Catholic ] diocese announced Friday. The names will be released by mid-February."

continued...

"For decades [Roman] Catholic officials knew of the [sexual] abuse but often preferred to reassign [ Roman Catholic ] clergy to posts in other jurisdictions, protecting the [Roman Catholic false] church WHILE PUTTING ADDITIONAL CHILDREN IN HARM'S WAY." [emphasis added]

"As early as 2002, the [Roman Catholic Charleston, SC] diocese had received allegations against 24 [Roman Catholic] priests since the 1960s, 12 of whom were removed from the ministry [sic]."

"The [Roman Catholic] Diocese of Charleston [all of SC] and many others throughout the U.S. have long refused to release a list of [Roman Catholic] priests and other employees they knew to have sexually abused minors."

"The local [Roman Catholic] diocese said it is currently reviewing its personnel files from 2007 through today. As part of its 2007 class-action settlement, the [Roman Catholic] diocese conducted an internal review of abuse allegations and shared results, including a list of names, with law enforcement. Once the current review is finished, officials will make public the complete list of abusive [Roman Catholic] priests."

"In 2007, the [Roman Catholic] diocese agreed to pay up to $12 million to nearly 150 people - victims born before Aug. 30, 1980, who were sexually abused by [Roman Catholic] priests and [Roman Catholic] diocese employees, and victims' eligible family members. Those payouts ranged from $13,000 to $425,000 each."

David Clohessy, former national director of the Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests, now director of SNAP in St. Louis, has been following developments in Charleston for many years. He welcomed the news, but noted that much more transparency was needed.

[ From CLL: 'Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests' <http://www.snapnetwork.org/> ]

"It's a very belated, grudging step that many church officials are taking these days because of tremendous pressure from prosecutors and parishioners," he said. "Kids are safer every time even a single predator is identified."

But Clohessy said the [Roman Catholic] diocese should do more than release the names of offending priests.

"We believe (the list) should include nuns, brothers, seminarians, bishops and lay (people)," he said. "We hope it includes photos and current or last-known whereabouts. If the goal is to protect kids, that information is crucial."

What's more, he called on the [Roman Catholic] diocese to share the date each allegation of abuse against [Roman] Catholic officials was deemed credible.

"That way we'll know how many years or decades [Roman Catholic] church officials have hidden these predators," he said.

"Also on Friday, the Jesuits U.S. Central and Southern Province released a list of names of Jesuits with credible allegations of sexual abuse of a minor, ... [two of whom had had assignments in SC, including one Jesuit priest

at two Roman Catholic "churches" [sic] in Greenville; and the other Jesuit priest at a Roman Catholic "church" [sic]

in Charleston and at Roman Catholic Cardinal Newman High School in Columbia] ."

CHARLESTON, SC - The [ Roman Catholic ] Diocese of Charleston, the governing body of all of South Carolina's

[ Roman ] Catholic churches [sic], will release the names of all [ Roman Catholic ] priests credibly accused of sexual abuse of minors since 1950.

As part of a 2007 settlement, the [ Roman Catholic ] Diocese undertook an extensive review of [ Roman Catholic ] priest personnel and other relevant files, the [ Roman Catholic false ] church's statement said. That review was shared with law enforcement. Currently, the [ Roman Catholic ] diocese is reviewing [ Roman Catholic ] priest personnel files from 2007 through the present and, once completed, the entire list of names of those [ Roman Catholic ] priest found to have abused children will be released.

The Charleston [ Roman Catholic ] diocese settled for $12 million the 2007 civil suit that accused [ Roman Catholic ] priests and employees of the South Carolina [ Roman ] Catholic church of sexually abusing children, The State reported. Before the settlement, the [ Roman Catholic false ] church had already paid out $2 million to victims of abuse.

Speaking with the Post and Courier, David Clohessy, director of the St. Louis Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests, said the [ Roman Catholic ] Diocese of Charleston's set release of name's is belated and a grudging step.

[ From CLL: 'Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests' <http://www.snapnetwork.org/> ]

"We believe (the list) should include nuns, brothers, seminarians, bishops and lay (people)," Clohessy said. "We hope it includes photos and current or last-known whereabouts. If the goal is to protect kids, that information is crucial."

CLL Note :

In 20-plus years of active Personhood legislation in the SC Legislature ( 1998 - 2018), none of the Pope - Appointed Roman Catholic Bishops during that time in SC (Thompson, Baker, Guglielmone) are known to have ever publicly supported Personhood legislation.

History of Personhood Legislation in South Carolina ( 1998 - 2018 )

In fact, US Roman Catholic Bishops in multiple other States have publicly opposed States' Personhood legislation.

Rome is NOT pro-child, Rome is NOT pro-life.

Rome is for Rome; even over the sexually abused, or broken, bloody, dead bodies of murdered children.

Rome is PERPETUATING child-murder by "abortion" in the United States intentionally !!!
