Children in Domestic Violence Homes: Societal Impact Beyond the Home

As Governor Haley tries to grapple with ways to curtail out of control domestic incidents in South Carolina; scores of kids are likely suffering in silence. Studies show that 1 million children between the ages of 3-17 are at risk of exposure to domestic violence.

Unfortunately, these children who are exposed to battering often experience fearful behavior. They are always on guard, watching and waiting for the next event to occur, feeling worthless and powerless.

This week on the TV show---the South Carolina Cornbread Festival SPOILS AN IMPORTANT COMMUNITY DIALOGUE on Children in Domestic Violence homes. The societal impact extends far beyond what happens in the home.

Tune in this Sunday morning, March 22nd, from 9:30 to 10:00 a.m. to WACH Fox

Breaking the Cycle: Keeping Violent Children Becoming Violent Adults

It's a proven fact. Women in abusive relationships have most likely grown up around violence victims and abusers. Most of them trace their pain and victimization to violence witnessed during childhood. To break the cycle experts say: begin with the

It's important to know that children from abusive homes can look fine to the outside world, inside they are in terrible pain. Many are also angry harboring rage, embarrassment, humiliation. Many become violent themselves.
