

From: Glaccum, David <DavidGlaccum@gov.sc.gov>
To: Adams, Chaney <ChaneyAdams@gov.sc.gov>
Patel, Swati <SwatiPatel@gov.sc.gov>
Pisarik, Holly <HollyPisarik@gov.sc.gov>
Baker, Josh <JoshBaker@gov.sc.gov>
CC: Godfrey, Rob <RobGodfrey@gov.sc.gov>
Date: 2/18/2016 2:00:32 PM
Subject: RE: Huffington Post inquiry (time sensitive)

1. Yes, the South Carolina law provides for an exception to the ID requirement in certain circumstances; and
2. In discussing the issue of voter ID in a speech (as referenced in that MSNBC article), Gov. Haley focuses on the issue of voter ID, not every aspect of the South Carolina law.

From: Adams, Chaney
Sent: Thursday, February 18, 2016 1:23 PM
To: Patel, Swati; Pisarik, Holly; Baker, Josh; Glaccum, David
Cc: Godfrey, Rob
Subject: Re: Huffington Post inquiry (time sensitive)

Do you all have any information on this?

From: Dana Liebelson <dana.liebelson@huffingtonpost.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 18, 2016 11:39 AM
To: Adams, Chaney
Subject: Huffington Post inquiry (time sensitive)

Good morning Chaney, I am a reporter with the Huffington Post, and I am working on a story about South Carolina's voter ID law. Can you respond to my questions below at your earliest convenience? I have already reached out to the state election commission, but these questions are specifically for the governor. Thank you for your help.

Questions:

I read that there has been some confusion about the law, and the governor has suggested the law requires an ID (rather than noting the affidavit exception.) Do you think that's the case? Why or why not?

Can you point me to statements the governor has made about the law where she has explained that it does not require an ID to vote, if a person cannot obtain one?

Please shoot me an email or give me a call: 202-624-9397

Best,
Dana