Caregiving on the Go

By Melissa Jirovec

Once my husband was discharged from hospital, I was incredibly determined for us to live normal lives as much as possible. My husband is a traumatic brain injury survivor and has mobility issues. ...more

Adaptive Equipment – A Driving Force

By Frances Maguire Paist

To those for whom mobility is limited, the ability to move around freely is a gift whose benefit can only be truly understood once it has been taken away. Imagine having to rely upon someone else for everything that you do – each trip to the grocery store, each run by the dry cleaners, each foray to the library or each errand to the pharmacy, doctor's office or your child's school. ...more

National Volunteer Transportation Provider Map Now Online

An Interactive Map with a listing, by city and state, of volunteer transportation providers is now available through the National Volunteer Transportation Center website. This map provides links to the websites and contact information for volunteer providers. ...more
